Hoover Urges Revival Of German Industries Under Allied Controls

WASHINGTON, March 23—(INS)—Former President Herbert Hoover, head of President Truman's recent economic mission to Germany and Russia, Sunday night urged revival of Germany's peaceful industries under adequate Allied controls.

He blamed the French and Russians for withholding certain goods produced in their zones and charged that American and British relief are helping to pay French and Russian reparations.

In his third report to President Truman, Hoover offered a four-fold plan for German industry which he called "a new economic concept in peace with new Germany." It proposed:

"1. We should free German industry, subject to a control commission which will see that she does no evil in industry, just as we see that she does not move into militarism through armies and navies.

"The difference between this concept and the 'level of industry' concept is the saving of several hundred millions of dollars a year to the American and British taxpayers. It is the difference between the regeneration and a further degeneration of Europe.

"2. The removal and destruction of plants (except direct arms plants) should stop.

"3. A further obstacle to building Germany as an essential unit of European economy arises from the Russian Government's acquiring a large part of the key operating industries in their zone. Germany in peace must be free from ownership of industry by a foreign government."

$21,000 in Miami Beach Gems Recovered; 2 Held

MIAMI, Fla., March 23—(AP)—Recovery of $21,000 in jewelry and arrest of two men in connection with its theft from Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Schlam in Miami Beach on Feb. 8 was announced Sunday by Joseph E. Thornton, head of the Miami office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Thornton said Mr. and Mrs. Schlam, visitors from Cleveland, Ohio, lost jewelry, luggage and clothing worth $22,000.

He said Miami Beach police had arrested Louis Hurwitz, 44, alias Chicken Murphy, a Miami Beach jewelry salesman who has a long prison record.

Sheriff's deputies arrested Gerald Offredo, 41, alias Gerald Offereda, who also has a prison record, Thornton said.

The FBI agent said the two men were caught after they attempted to get a Miami jeweler to handle the stolen gems. The County Solicitor's office has issued capiases for the two men, Thornton said.

Two Powerful Jet Planes To Be Unveiled Soon

WASHINGTON, March 23—(UP)—The Army Air Forces will soon take the secrecy wraps off two powerful new jet fighters which are expected to be faster than existing models, AAF officers revealed Sunday.

These are the P-86, made by North American, and the P-87, built by Curtiss-Wright. Both are powered with the new axial flow turbo jet engine, shaped like a streamlined torpedo, that is used in the XP-84.

Shutdown of Canada Border U. S. Patrols Begun

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP)—Treasury officials said Sunday night that a conditional shutdown of anti-smuggling patrols on the Canadian border, stemming from House cuts in the Department's appropriation for the year starting July 1, had gotten under way.

These officials said cuts, though not such deep ones, must extend to other customs patrol operations such as those along the Mexican border, unless the Department gets some of the money back in the Senate.

Other Treasury agencies principally affected by the slash of $80,000,000 in departmental operating budgets—the Internal Revenue Enforcement Branch, Coast Guard and Secret Service—are preparing comparable firing programs but do not have them so far advanced.

Accused Judge To Learn Fate Today

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 23—(UP)—After 10 hours a jury reached a verdict Sunday in the trial of former Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson and five co-defendants charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States. Federal Judge James Fee announced that he would accept the verdict Monday morning. The jury was locked up for the night.

The 74-year-old Johnson, on trial in the same courtroom where he had often presided during his 20-year tenure on the Pennsylvania Middle District bench, was accused of conspiring with the other five defendants for the sale of favorable decisions and court appointments.

The other defendants were three of Johnson's sons, Donald M., Miller A. and Albert W. Johnson, Jr.; John Memolo, retired Scranton attorney, and Jacob Greenes, 46-year-old Scranton beer salesman.

Auto Workers Stand by Pay Demand—Reuther

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 23—(AP)—Pres. Walter P. Reuther of the CIO United Auto Workers said Sunday that action of the CIO United Rubber Workers in settling for an 11½-cent hourly pay increase would "in no way affect" the UAW's demands for an industry-wide 23½-cent raise for its 900,000 members.

Reuther, commenting on the Rubber Workers' action Saturday night (See story on Page 11) in accepting 11½ cents from the industry as a compromise on their original demands for 26 cents, said:

"I'm not familiar with the details of their settlement, but as far as we are concerned it in no way affects our original demands. A settlement of the Rubber Workers' issue does not change the economic facts connected with our demands."

Some sources close to the UAW said there was considerable concern as to whether the Rubber Workers' compromise had jeopardized the Auto Workers' hopes for the 23½-cent boost.

Truman Seen Ready To Test Congress With Portal Bill Veto

WASHINGTON, March 23 —(UP) — Well-informed Congressional quarters said Sunday night that President Truman will veto pending portal pay legislation and thus invite the first showdown with the Republican - controlled Congress over New Deal labor legislation.

They also predicted the President will win out because the Senate "unquestionably" will sustain the veto even if the House overrides it.

House Republican leaders meantime are debating strategy to avoid a veto of their strike-control bill which comes up for action on April 14. They, too, believe they have strength enough to bypass a veto but are apprehensive over what the Senate might do.

Chairman Fred A. Hartley, Jr., Republican, New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, said he and Chairman Robert A. Taft, Republican, Ohio, of the Senate Labor Committee, "might" call on the President to explore his po-

Two of the nation's most eminent amateur photographers will be masters of ceremony at The Atlanta Constitution's Photographic Clinic in Municipal Auditorium March 31 and April 1.

They are Dr. Wallace Rogers, Methodist minister who in semi-retirement is serving as Associate Pastor of First Methodist Church, and Hal L. Drake, Atlanta business man.

Amateurs only in the sense that they shoot pictures for fun and for the public good and not for pay, these two men, who are fast friends and often shoot shoulder-to-shoulder, so to speak, perhaps have contributed as much to the advancement of photography and to the expression of photographic art as any two Southerners.

Dr. Rogers got into the game 50 years ago when, as a boy, he used to loaf around the gallery of a German photographer in Cartersville. Photography intrigued him and having a scientific, as well as an ecclesiastic, mind, he looked upon the camera as a useful vehicle in scientific research.

When Prof. B. C. Peacock discovered a Kentucky warbler nesting in a woods on Peachtree Street, he knew he had something. The Kentucky warbler had never been known to venture as far south as Atlanta, and so Prof. Peacock advised the U. S. Biological Survey of his discovery.

Intrigue In Greece Charged

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP) United States documents—their "secret" label removed Sunday night under congressional pressure—accused Russia of waging a "war of nerves" against Turkey, told of a "master plan" to bring Greece under Communist domination, and called Poland frankly a Russian "Satellite."

The documents—laid before the house Foreign Affairs Committee for "background" on the administration's program to help Greece and Turkey ward off encroaching Communism—reported, too, that Britain had asked this nation to take over the "major responsibility" for financing military as well as civilian needs in the two southern European countries.

One document declared that "the United States recognizes that the maintenance of Greek independence and territorial integrity is of importance to the security and independence of the whole Near and Middle Eastern area, which is of vital importance to U. S. security."

It also disclosed that the United States:

1. Has advised Greece that "we . . . favor a retention without change of 1939 Greek boundaries" in the "interests of over-all Balkan stability."

2. Will support the Greek desire to present its claim against Albania for northern Epirus to the foreign ministers' council after the Council has completed the peace treaties.

3. Favors the development of a free zone under Greek sovereignty in the port of Salonika, to provide a commercial outlet to the Aegean for Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

4. Favors Britain's ceding to Greece the island of Cyprus, where Britain now holds Jews attempting to enter Palestine.

5. Is now negotiating a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation with Greece.

Officials, when asked about these points, said the document was a "working paper" and did not necessarily represent official United States policy.

In outlining the plight of Greece, another document placed the primary responsibility for the "steadily deteriorating economic conditions and worsening of internal order" upon the "Communist-controlled left movement in Greece."

And it added:

"Armed band activities, directed and assisted from outside the country, are part of a master plan to separate Macedonia from Greece and to make untenable any Greek government not subservient to Communist aims.

"U. S. representatives in Greece have become convinced that the increasing effrontery of Greece's northern neighbors and of EAM

Chalmers Strike Ended By Union Voting To Work Without Contract

MILWAUKEE, March 23—(UP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers local at the Allis-Chalmers farm equipment plant voted three to one Sunday to call off their bitter, 327-day-old strike against the company and return to work Monday without a contract.

Members of the Local, No. 248, decided at a closed meeting to end the strike on the recommendation of Union officials. The Local's action came as a surprise.

Robert Buse, Local President, announced the vote. He did not reveal the exact figure but said a preliminary count showed balloting was at least three to one in favor of returning to work. An estimated 1,500 members cast ballots.

The decision to call off the strike without having gained any of the wage demands or benefits for which the strike was called was a major blow to the Union, whose officials presently are subject of a Congressional investigation for alleged Communist affiliations.

Buse told the strikers:

"The company expected us to hold out till hell froze over. This is a surprise move, a tactic they did not expect. This is not a question of defeat. It is merely a change of tactics designed to break the stalemate which the company has brought out."

Union officials said the Union would "carry on in the Allis-Chalmers shop" its fight for a contract and increased wages. But their decision to return to work without a contract was a clean-cut victory for the Company.

One Union member, unemployed since the strike was called last April 30, left the Union meeting in Milwaukee Auditorium after casting a ballot to end the walkout.

LACK OF FUNDS A POLITICAL BREAK?

Thompson Pictured With All To Gain

By M. L. ST. JOHN

The spot on which the Georgia Legislature put Acting Gov. Thompson by going home without providing for expanded State services may prove to be a political break for Thompson in future campaigns, observers said Sunday night.

With the Legislature failing to pass an appropriations bill or revenue measures to pay the $38,000,000 which would have been needed, anything that the Acting Governor can do toward expanding State services will be to his personal credit, observers said.

They recalled that Thompson, as Revenue Commissioner, increased State revenues $20,000,000 in one year without any new tax laws, and thereby made it possible for Gov. Arnall to inaugurate the 50 percent pay raise for teachers. Thompson has announced he will continue this pay raise, even if it means paring down other services. The raise costs $16,000,000.

While Thompson would have

Plane From Georgia Field Lost, 9 Aboard

HALIFAX, N. S., March 23—(AP) A United States Army Air Forces transport plane with nine persons aboard and based at Robins Field, Macon, Ga., was reported missing Sunday night on a flight from Westover Field, Mass., to Harmon Field, Stephenville, Newfoundland, and search planes were sent aloft on the possibility the American craft may have crashed within a few miles of its destination.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Air Command here said four search planes radioed they had been unable to discover any trace of the four-engined C-54 Skymaster in the hilly, heavily-wooded area about Harmon Field, located on the Southwest coast of Newfoundland.

Air Transport Command Headquarters in New York said the pilot of the missing plane made radio contact with Harmon Field when only five miles from the Newfoundland base at the end of the 800-mile flight. The pilot reported his altitude at 2,200 feet and said he was ready to come in for a landing, ATC said.

The plane never landed and no further messages from it were received. ATC said the plane was carrying five crew members, four passengers and cargo.

When the pilot last reported his position, the weather around Harmon Field was described as good.

The Transport Command listed the plane Sunday night as "overdue and presumed lost."

The plane, scheduled to have continued from Harmon Field to Germany for an inspection trip, left Westover Field at 10:40 a. m. Sunday, the Westover Field Public Relations office said, and was due at Stephenville at 2:30 p. m. At the latter hour the pilot made his last radio report.

Showers Are Expected With 72-Degree Weather

Atlanta's warm weather will continue today, according to the weatherman, but scattered showers will accompany the higher temperatures. Thundershowers are expected late in the afternoon. Beginning at 52 degrees this morning the thermometer will rise to 72 by mid-afternoon.

Rains will cease by Tuesday and the weather will continue warm, the weatherman predicted. Sunday's high was 65 degrees and the low 42.

PHONE WEDDING IDEA SPREADS

Cupid Uses Trans-Ocean Wires To Tie Another Atlantan's 'Knot'

When Marvin Kite, of Atlanta was married in a transAtlantic telephone ceremony recently to Miss Doris Press, of London, England, he provided the solution to the wedding problem of another Atlantan.

Sunday, Kite and his bride were witnesses to the transAtlantic phone wedding of Jack Cranshaw, of 502 Burroughs Ave., S. W., to Miss Anna Marie McGarriety, in far-away Southampton, England.

And—the same minister performed the ceremony. He is the Rev. John L. Baggott, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, of College Park.

Cranshaw and his bride will have another ceremony when she gets to Atlanta, as did the Kites.

Cranshaw, 24, now with the chemical department of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, was for 18 months an officer in the United States Merchant Marine. On one of his ship's calls at Southampton he met and became engaged to the winsome Irish lass whose home is in Scotland.

Last September, Cranshaw was headed for Southampton and a wedding when his ship, the U. S. Army transport Alexander, struck a drifting mine and sank three hours clear of Bremerhaven, Germany. Cranshaw and other members of the crew were rescued and returned to Bremerhaven. But, instead of going on to Southampton, they were sent to the United States aboard another ship and he left the Merchant Marine.

Then Cranshaw read of Kite's second wedding to Miss Press and their marriage by trans-Atlantic phone.

Cranshaw telephoned Kite and got the benefit of his experience.

Into the mails went a wedding ring for Miss McGarriety, exactly like one she sent him.

Sunday, the call was put through from Dr. Baggott's church study. Dr. Baggott and Cranshaw used one extension of the telephone. Mr. and Mrs. Kite and Cranshaw's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cranshaw, listened at another extension as witnesses.

The double ring ceremony took six minutes. For six minutes more, Cranshaw talked with his "telephone" bride.

"I'm all excited and terribly happy," she said. "How about you?" That, replied Cranshaw, was how he felt.

Then Cranshaw thanked the Kites, whom he had not met personally until they came at his invitation to witness his ceremony, and went home to wait until his bride can obtain a plane reservation and come to Atlanta for that second wedding.

'Call Russia's Bluff,' Says Solon; Bar U. S. Loans To Red Satellites

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP) Rep. Colmer, Democrat, Mississippi, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, proposed Sunday night that the United States "call Russia's bluff in the only language that the Soviet Union apparently can understand—economic retaliation."

Calling for a stiffer American policy toward Communist-dominated governments, Colmer announced he will introduce Monday a resolution to bar any United States loans or other assistance to those countries.

The resolution would place Congress on record as advocating:

1. No write-off of lend-lease accounts unless the full terms of the lend-lease act have been satisfied.

2. End of "all aid in any form" to governments which have failed to carry out their commitments to the United States.

3. No new loans for such governments, and suspension of previously negotiated loans, until political agreements with this country have been fulfilled.

4. Action to prevent such nations from obtaining industrial secrets and production "know-how" vital to national security.

5. Complete reciprocity between the United States and other countries on admission and access to industrial plants, instead of "one-way co-operation."

6. Insistence that the United States prevent the stripping of Germany through "excessive reparations," in order to make Germany self-sufficient and end relief expenditures there.

7. Notice to all other nations that the objective of United States policy is "to secure and maintain a just and lasting peace for a free world."

Acknowledging that his resolution is aimed at the Soviet Union, Colmer said in a statement that some governments have failed to keep political agreements for free elections in liberated countries and former enemy territory and have continued "subversive propaganda both in these countries and in the United States tantamount to intervention in their affairs."

5,000 MILES AWAY DIPLOMATS QUARREL

There's a Bit of Peace Near Washington

WASHINGTON, March 23—(UP)—Five thousand miles from the Moscow Conference, a guard of honor keeps a 24-hour watch over a sacred piece of American soil.

It's a far cry from the conference table to a chunk of white marble . . . a few square feet of dirt and grass on a Virginia hillside near Washington.

But to the 12 American soldiers who "walk post" around that marble monument, there's a definite connection between the diplomats trying to secure a permanent peace—and the Tomb of an Unknown Soldier who died in the war that was to end all wars.

Sgt. Troy Hale, a 24-year-old trooper from Tulsa, Okla., is one of the guards who sees a connection. He looks at you squarely and says with a soft, Southwestern drawl:

"It's an honor to guard the tomb. You feel as if you're guarding the peace, too, because you're helping people to remember and respect the men who gave their lives to win it."

Or listen to tall, lean Cpl. James Townsley, Jr., of Hammond, Indiana:

"I always feel humble and a little nervous," Townsley said. "Just the other day a little old man and woman came up to me and told me they often thought of us walking out here alone on the cold Winter nights. They said they wanted us to know they were grateful. Because they lost a son in the Pacific and they were glad that every minute of the day someone is paying honor to those who died for their country."

Last Christmas the ceremonial detachment at the tomb received some 400 letters—mostly from people who had lost someone in the

The spot on which the Georgia Legislature put Acting Gov. Thompson by going home without providing for expanded State services may prove to be a political break for Thompson in future campaigns, observers said Sunday night.

With the Legislature failing to pass an appropriations bill or revenue measures to pay the $38,000,000 which would have been needed, anything that the Acting Governor can do toward expanding State services will be to his personal credit, observers said.

They recalled that Thompson, as Revenue Commissioner, increased State revenues $20,000,000 in one year without any new tax laws, and thereby made it possible for Gov. Arnall to inaugurate the 50 percent pay raise for teachers. Thompson has announced he will continue this pay raise, even if it means paring down other services. The raise costs $16,000,000.

While Thompson would have

Truman Seen Ready To Test Congress With Portal Bill Veto

WASHINGTON, March 23 — (UP) — Well-informed Congressional quarters said Sunday night that President Truman will veto pending portal pay legislation and thus invite the first showdown with the Republican - controlled Congress over New Deal labor legislation.

They also predicted the President will win out because the Senate "unquestionably" will sustain the veto even if the House overrides it.

House Republican leaders meantime are debating strategy to avoid a veto of their strike-control bill which comes up for action on April 14. They, too, believe they have strength enough to bypass a veto but are apprehensive over what the Senate might do.

Chairman Fred A. Hartley, Jr., Republican, New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, said he and Chairman Robert A. Taft, Republican, Ohio, of the Senate Labor Committee, "might" call on the President to explore his po-

Plane From Georgia Field Lost, 9 Aboard

HALIFAX, N. S., March 23—(AP) A United States Army Air Forces transport plane with nine persons aboard and based at Robins Field, Macon, Ga., was reported missing Sunday night on a flight from Westover Field, Mass., to Harmon Field, Stephenville, Newfoundland, and search planes were sent aloft on the possibility the American craft may have crashed within a few miles of its destination.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Air Command here said four search planes radioed they had been unable to discover any trace of the four-engined C-54 Skymaster in the hilly, heavily-wooded area about Harmon Field, located on the Southwest coast of Newfoundland.

Air Transport Command Headquarters in New York said the pilot of the missing plane made radio contact with Harmon Field when only five miles from the Newfoundland base at the end of the 800-mile flight. The pilot reported his altitude at 2,200 feet and said he was ready to come in for a landing, ATC said.

The plane never landed and no further messages from it were received. ATC said the plane was carrying five crew members, four passengers and cargo.

When the pilot last reported his position, the weather around Harmon Field was described as good.

The plane, scheduled to have continued from Harmon Field to Germany for an inspection trip, left Westover Field at 10:40 a. m. Sunday, the Westover Field Public Relations office said, and was due at Stephenville at 2:30 p. m. At the latter hour the pilot made his last radio report.

Showers Are Expected With 72-Degree Weather

Atlanta's warm weather will continue today, according to the weatherman, but scattered showers will accompany the higher temperatures. Thundershowers are expected late in the afternoon. Beginning at 52 degrees this morning the thermometer will rise to 72 by mid-afternoon.

Rains will cease by Tuesday and the weather will continue warm, the weatherman predicted. Sunday's high was 65 degrees and the low 42.

PHONE WEDDING IDEA SPREADS

When Marvin Kite, of Atlanta was married in a transAtlantic telephone ceremony recently to Miss Doris Press, of London, England, he provided the solution to the wedding problem of another Atlantan.

Sunday, Kite and his bride were witnesses to the transAtlantic phone wedding of Jack Cranshaw, of 502 Burroughs Ave., S. W. to Miss Anna Marie McGarriety, in far-away Southampton, England.

And—the same minister performed the ceremony. He is the Rev. John L. Baggott, Pastor of the First Baptist Church, of College Park.

Cranshaw and his bride will have another ceremony when she gets to Atlanta, as did the Kites.

Cranshaw, 24, now with the chemical department of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, was for 18 months an officer in the United States Merchant Marine. On one of his ship's calls at Southampton he met and became engaged to the winsome Irish lass whose home is in Scotland.

Last September, Cranshaw was headed for Southampton and a wedding when his ship, the U. S. Army transport Alexander, struck a drifting mine and sank three hours clear of Bremerhaven, Germany. Cranshaw and other members of the crew were rescued and returned to Bremerhaven. But, instead of going on to Southampton, they were sent to the United States aboard another ship and he left the Merchant Marine.

Then Cranshaw read of Kite's second wedding to Miss Press and their marriage by trans-Atlantic phone.

Cranshaw telephoned Kite and got the benefit of his experience.

Into the mails went a wedding ring for Miss McGarriety, exactly like one she sent him.

Sunday, the call was put through from Dr. Baggott's church study. Dr. Baggott and Cranshaw used one extension of the telephone. Mr. and Mrs. Kite and Cranshaw's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cranshaw, listened at another extension as witnesses.

The double ring ceremony took six minutes. For six minutes more, Cranshaw talked with his "telephone" bride.

"I'm all excited and terribly happy," she said. "How about you?" That, replied Cranshaw, was how he felt.

Then Cranshaw thanked the Kites, whom he had not met personally until they came at his invitation to witness his ceremony, and went home to wait until his bride can obtain a plane reservation and come to Atlanta for that second wedding.

5,000 MILES AWAY DIPLOMATS QUARREL

There's a Bit of Peace Near Washington

WASHINGTON, March 23—(UP)—Five thousand miles from the Moscow Conference, a guard of honor keeps a 24-hour watch over a sacred piece of American soil.

It's a far cry from the conference table to a chunk of white marble . . . a few square feet of dirt and grass on a Virginia hillside near Washington.

But to the 12 American soldiers who "walk post" around that marble monument, there's a definite connection between the diplomats trying to secure a permanent peace—and the Tomb of an Unknown Soldier who died in the war that was to end all wars.

Sgt. Troy Hale, a 24-year-old trooper from Tulsa, Okla., is one of the guards who sees a connection. He looks at you squarely and says with a soft, Southwestern drawl:

"It's an honor to guard the tomb. You feel as if you're guarding the peace, too, because you're helping people to remember and respect the men who gave their lives to win it."

Or listen to tall, lean Cpl. James Townsley, Jr., of Hammond, Indiana:

"I always feel humble and a little nervous," Townsley said. "Just the other day a little old man and woman came up to me and told me they often thought of us walking out here alone on the cold Winter nights. They said they wanted us to know they were grateful. Because they lost a son in the Pacific and they were glad that every minute of the day someone is paying honor to those who died for their country."

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP) Rep. Colmer, Democrat, Mississippi, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, proposed Sunday night that the United States "call Russia's bluff in the only language that the Soviet Union apparently can understand—economic retaliation."

Calling for a stiffer American policy toward Communist-dominated governments, Colmer announced he will introduce Monday a resolution to bar any United States loans or other assistance to those countries.

The resolution would place Congress on record as advocating:

1. No write-off of lend-lease accounts unless the full terms of the lend-lease act have been satisfied.

2. End of "all aid in any form" to governments which have failed to carry out their commitments to the United States.

3. No new loans for such governments, and suspension of previously negotiated loans, until political agreements with this country have been fulfilled.

4. Action to prevent such nations from obtaining industrial secrets and production "know-how" vital to national security.

5. Complete reciprocity between the United States and other countries on admission and access to industrial plants, instead of "one-way co-operation."

6. Insistence that the United States prevent the stripping of Germany through "excessive reparations," in order to make Germany self-sufficient and end relief expenditures there.

7. Notice to all other nations that the objective of United States policy is "to secure and maintain a just and lasting peace for a free world."

Acknowledging that his resolution is aimed at the Soviet Union, Colmer said in a statement that some governments have failed to keep political agreements for free elections in liberated countries and former enemy territory and have continued "subversive propaganda both in these countries and in the United States tantamount to intervention in their affairs."

Sugar, Rubber Controls, Draft, First in Senate

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP)—Racing against a March 31 deadline, Republican Senate leaders Sunday gave sugar and rubber controls and a bill to maintain Selective Service records top priority in a busy week.

That date originally was the target, too, for action on the plan to aid Greece and Turkey but leaders now have abandoned hope of getting it through Congress this week.

Both the sugar rationing and pricing program and the wartime rubber control program expire automatically at the end of the month unless Congress continues them. The House already has acted to extend both programs until October.

The Selective Service Act also expires on March 31, but President Truman has requested legislation to keep intact the registration rolls and other records.

Senate leaders hope to dispose of these measures Monday, together with authorization for United States participation in the International Refugee Organization. This would clear the way for debate later this week on the nomination of David E. Lilienthal as Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Forty-nine Senators—a majority—already have pledged votes for Lilienthal's confirmation but his opponents have made it clear that they intend to wage a bitter fight. The Senate also must act on five other commission nominations.

House leaders, aided by more rigid control over debate, expect quick passage of a $1,600,000,000 bill to provide funds for Labor Department and Security agencies. The bill junks the Federal Conciliation Service by refusing pay for Director Edgar Warren and many of his subordinates.

If this measure is passed on schedule, House Republicans plan to call up Wednesday the bill to reduce Federal income taxes 20 percent in the lower brackets and 20 percent elsewhere. The bill cannot be amended on the floor, and House Republican leaders forecast that it will be passed. It will then go to the Senate, where opposition is anticipated.

President Truman's plea for a $400,000,000 fund and broad powers to aid Greece and Turkey against Communism will come up for hearings before both Senate and House committees Monday.

Other Capitol Hill business includes closed sessions of the Senate and House Labor Committees to draft bills to curb industrial disputes; the opening of hearings by the House Committee on Un-American Activities on a bill by Rep. Rankin, Democrat, Mississippi, to outlaw the Communist Party, and a session of the Senate Banking Committee to consider rent controls.

Truman Needs GOP Counsel, Admits Lucas

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP)—Sen. Lucas, Democrat, Illinois, predicted Sunday that President Truman may invite Republican consultation on other world problems if two-party co-operation survives congressional debate over the Greek-Turkey proposal.

"We must have two-party support in the whole field of foreign affairs," he declared in an interview. "That is the only way we can present an effective front to the world. And if co-operation is to work out, the Republicans must be consulted on situations everywhere—the little decisions as well as the big ones."

Sen. Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, has pointed out repeatedly that the field of advance consultation thus far has been limited to matters involving the United Nations Organization, the settlement with Germany and the Balkan peace treaties.

He has made some suggestions about American policy in China and Latin America, but there has been no White House move to take the leaders of the congressional majority behind the scenes ahead of time in dealings with those areas. However, the President was reported to have told Vandenberg that he wants to consult with him later about China.

Lucas expressed belief that final Republican reaction to the President's request for $400,000,000 in financial and limited military aid to Greece and Turkey will indicate how far the congressional majority party is willing to go in backing up the Administration.

'Sinister,' British Call Red Proposal

By WES GALLAGHER

MOSCOW, March 23—(AP)—British and American sources Sunday viewed Russian's proposal for a centralized German Government as a bid for German support and an attempt to create a system which the Communist Party will have the best chance to control.

Generally the British appeared more perturbed than the Americans by Foreign Minister Molotov's proposal of Saturday. One British source described the entire Soviet approach at the Foreign Ministers' Council as "sinister" in that, in his view, it appeared to put the wooing of German support about the question of European security.

Despite the two-day recess until Tuesday in the ministers' meetings, delegations of the four powers were busy as a special committee sorted out the main points of disagreement and agreement over the proposals on Germany.

With two weeks' work behind it, the Foreign Ministers' Council has yet to come to agreement on any fundamental principles. Most observers felt the Conference would run another month at least, unless differences become so great Sec. Marshall decides it is no further use to argue questions at this time.

Even the Austrian Treaty, which was expected to be comparatively easy, had made virtually no prograss.

9-Mile Ice Floe Damming River In West Vanishes

MILES CITY, Mont., March 23 (AP) — A nine-mile-long ice floe, which partly blocked the Yellowstone River and sent flood waters surging over hundreds of acres of farmland near the Montana-North Dakota border, has disappeared, an aviator reported late Sunday.

Roy W. Milligan, Civil Air Patrol's Montana Wing Commander, said a flight over the swollen Yellowstone revealed the large floating ice pack, which Saturday night was traveling at about 10 miles an hour must have disintegrated in the Yellowstone, cracked up against ice in the Missouri, or was swept under surface ice which still covers the deep and rapidly-flowing Missouri River.

He said the Yellowstone appeared to be returning to its banks, after rain Saturday night and warm weather Sunday melted some floating ice.

Scores of farmers and community residents were evacuated by boats and automobiles, when the ice block neared the North Dakota confluence of the two rivers Saturday and after they had been warned that the two streams might sweep over thousands of acres, should the floe dam both rivers.

Some danger exists, Milligan said, that the missing ice island might partly block the Missouri downstream in North Dakota.

China Presses Russia On Machinery Return

NANKING, Monday, March 24—(AP)—The Central Committee of the Kuomintang, China's governing party, urged Sunday that Russia be called upon to fulfill the treaty of 1945 and open negotiations over removal of industrial equipment from Manchuria.

The demand was in the form of a resolution which persons in attendance said ended the closed 10-day policy session of the committee.

The 1945 treaty gave Russia certain special rights in Manchuria, including joint operation of some railroads, use of Port Arthur as a naval base, and joint use with China of Dairen as a free commercial port under Chinese administration.

A Chinese government army still is sitting outside Dairen, waiting for the Russians to hand it over. There has been no inkling of Soviet intentions, but the independent newspaper Hsin Min Pao published a wholly unconfirmed account that a warship of "a certain power" had just taken over Haiyang island, 80 miles east of Dairen and a similar distance west of Soviet-occupied northern Korea. Government sources said they knew nothing about it.

The Manchurian industrial equipment, upon which China was counting for her own rehabilitation, was removed during the Soviet occupation of all Manchuria after the Japanese surrender.

China's attitude towards Russia was the subject of warm debate in the Kuomintang committee. Several members charged Foreign Minister Wang Shih-Chieh with being "weak-kneed," but Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shep defended him.

The Chinese remained officially mum on a United States reminder that settlement is in order for a two-billion-dollar lend-lease balance, but informed quarters said the request was "a considerable surprise."

One Kuomintang leader said China is seeking further financial support rather than settlement of old debts.

Revolutionary War Hero Of Georgia Article's Topic

CLINTON, S. C., March 23—(AP) Lt. Col. James Jackson, Revolutionary War hero of Georgia, is the subject of an article by Associate History Professor W. O. Foster of Presbyterian Colege, to be published in the September issue of the Georgia Historical Review.

Foster, a native of Georgia, said Jackson had been written about "but little, although he was a Georgia governor, congressman and state senator, and a county, town and fort in Georgia were named for him."

Survivor of Winecoff Fire Jump Hopes To 'Graduate' From Grady

By BILL TARLETON

Dorothy Moen, 16-year-old Columbus High School victim of the Winecoff Hotel fire, hopes that her stay at Grady Hospital is about to end at long last, since doctors told her last week that they plan to remove the cast from her right leg and substitute a brace, a major step toward her dismissal.

When the Winecoff burned, Dorothy was in Atlanta attending the Hi-Y Youth Convention with three of her classmates from Baker Village High in Columbus.

Two of her companions died in the fire; a third, Annie Bess Dansley, left Grady two months ago. Now Dorothy, who jumped from the seventh floor, has reason to hope that soon she will be "back home" with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Vardaman.

Last week, Grady specialists completed a bone graft to her left arm, which had stubbornly refused to heal, and now, as soon as the leg brace is fitted she may be able to leave the hospital, at least for short visits home.

Dorothy describes her long stay at the hospital "as pretty tiresome," but hastens to add that "everybody" has been "wonderful" in helping her keep in good spirits while at Grady.

"My cast has autographs on every square inch, from friends, doctors, and even people whom I'd never seen," she says; "and I've received bushels of fan letters, including some from foreign countries."

Asked if any of her "fan" letters were love letters, Dorothy blushingly said "No," although she admitted that one very touching letter she received was from a boy who said he wished "I had been there to catch you when you jumped."

Dorothy, a senior at the time of the fire, is continuing her studies in the hospital, and has been promised a diploma when her class is graduated in June.

When she finishes with school and doctors, she wants to do secretarial work.

In Atlanta?

"Well, could be!" says Dorothy.

Crippled Tots Gain By Ironic Tragedy

By DORIS LOCKERMAN

Through an ironic tragedy, many a poor crippled child will benefit from the legacy of the victim of the unsolved bathhouse slaying of Sept. 29, who died, police say, trying to protect his card-playing friends from an unidentified holdup operator knows as "FBI."

A life insurance policy in the sum of $3,000 was among the slain man's effects, and the beneficiary is the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

Albert Armstrong, Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, says the donor was not a Mason and no one knows why he left the money to the handicapped youngsters.

"We hear he never gambled himself, and was really an innocent victim in the fatal brawl," said Armstrong. "He is supposed to have been trying to straighten out the trouble when he was shot."

FISH STORY BY NAHLIK

Detective Leo Nahlik, former Chief of the DeKalb County Police, has come back from a month in Florida with a new kind of fish tale. It seems Nahlik, a rugged athlete and former Marine, and several friends, took a boat off the shore of Miami for a days' deep sea fishing. They were doing all right until their craft capsized and sank. Then men grabbed a buoyant five-gallon can bobbing around, and for two hours took turns treading water trying to hold the can to attract the attention of fishing boats near by. Nahlik, who had two broken ribs, said several boats passed within sight of them, but "broke our hearts by going right on." Finally, he said, just as they had almost given up hope, a small boat sighted their tin-can SOS and pulled them out of the water.

EASY LIFE BEATS FORD

High water, low water, huntin' and fishin'—this irresistable combination has beaten the indomitable Henry Ford out of a $10,000,000 investment in Brazil, according to Johnny Phelps, who was there and knows. Phelps operates the G. I. Parts, Inc., in Forest Park these days, but during the war he was chasing wild rubber plants for the Rubber Development Corporation in Fordlandia and Belterra, and he watched Ford's great effort to improve the lot of the Portuguese natives of the Tapajos River blunted and finally ruined by their love of the easy life. When Ford pulled out of the huge project recently, Phelps observed that the automobile tycoon's desire to build up that section was impaled on another fact: the natives work only 96 days a year. They're too busy resting to do any more.

BEARDED FUNNY BUSINESS

The old-time song hits were no fly-by-nights. If they weren't good for three or four seasons, the publishers thought they had a turkey on their hands.

Charles Underwood, for many years an advance agent for the big minstrel shows of yesteryear, was in town recently beating his drums for the recently revived Sparks Circus, and was full of memories about the show business of the pre-radio-movies era.

"These days a new song lasts a week or at most two or three weeks," Charley said, "but I have seen 'em use a good song for three or four full seasons back in the minstrel days, and Jack Richards, with the Al G. Fields show, sang, 'When You and I Were Young, Maggie' for at least 16 years."

Vaudeville acts in those days were fairly solid too. Weaver Brothers and Elviry played year in and year out at the Keith Vaudeville house in Atlanta, Underwood said, and they specialized in a song called, "Down in Arkansas." It had a verse about a girl being so cross-eyed that when she cried the tears ran down her back.

"I heard that on the radio recently," Charley said.

Another perennial of the minstrel days was about the man with a bicycle who was asked to swap it for a cow. The bikeman said, "Wouldn't I look funny riding that cow down the street?" But the cowman had a comeback. "Yes, but not as funny as I would look trying to milk that bicycle!"

Underwood doesn't think there's much new in the funny business. He heard that joke on the radio a few weeks ago too.

SAVE THAT V-MAIL

Spring cleaning enthusiasts with ex-servicemen in their families were told this week not to throw out that bundle of letters from the veteran when he was in service. The National Commander of the Disabled American Veterans has issued a statement that disabled veterans experiencing difficulty in proving their disabilities are service-connected, often find suitable evidence in old letters and V-Mail sent home while they were away.

Evangelize or Die, Moore Warns Methodists

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

Nearly 1,000 Atlanta churchfolk Sunday afternoon heard Bishop Arthur J. Moore exhort that church people take Jesus Christ outside the four walls of church sanctuaries and give the world a new demonstration of faith and loyalty as they should try to go into the byways of human life and make Him known.

In a sermon on evangelism Bishop Moore formally launched a two-weeks' pre-Easter revival and evangelistic campaign among the Atlanta Methodist churches. "Methodism must evangelize or die," said he. The Bible's best binding is not sealskin, said he, but shoe leather. Urging personal evangelistic effort, the bishop stated that only in this way might Christian believers prove themselves disciples of Christ, glorify God, and enter into a larger and richer personal experience.

Homer Rodeheaver, nationally known song leader, directed the great gathering in singing favorite gospel songs. He directed special attention to the exceptionally fine music made by representatives of various denominations in the audience, and suggested similar cooperation among churchfolk would make a like impression upon the world.

For four days this week Atlanta Methodist churches will engage in a home visitation campaign, with workers meeting at Wesley Memorial Church for instruction today and Wednesday at 11 o'clock.

CHIMNEY SMOKE EVOKES FIREMEN

The old adage "Where there's fire," prompted a frantic telephone alarm to Atlanta's fire department Sunday afternoon.

All available downtown equipment screamed to the scene and jammed Broad Street at the viaduct while firemen threw up ladders and prepared to combat a fire.

The smoke came from a chimney.

Death in Delhi, Strike in Bombay On Pakistan Day

NEW DELHI, India, March 23 (AP) — Communal fighting broke out between Moslems and Sikhs in the old City of Delhi Sunday in a Pakistan day flareup which coincided with the opening here of an inter-Asian conference representing more than 20 countries.

At least one person was killed and several were injured. Military patrols were called out, and a curfew was imposed from 4 p. m. to 7 a. m. in Delhi.

The fighting occurred despite an appeal by M. A. Jinnah, President of the Moslem league, for peaceful observance of Pakistan Day, on which all members of the league were to renew their pledges to achieve Pakistan—an independent Moslem state.

The situation remained calm in New Delhi, where Lord Mountbatten, viceroy designate, had taken up residence in the Viceregal Lodge.

In Bombay, efforts to halt a paralyzing strike of streetcar and bus employees failed. Employers and employees announced service would cease at midnight. Union officials said the strike was for higher wages.

Four Teen-Agers Die at Crossing

CHICAGO, March 23 — (AP) — Four teen-agers were killed Sunday when their automobile and a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train, the Ohioan, collided at a 147th Street crossing near suburban Calumet City on the South Side.

The dead, two young couples homeward bound after spending the evening in Chicago, were: Jack de Paoli, 17, 588 Sibley Blvd., Hammond, Ind.; Marilyn Buckley, 16, 583 Wentworth Ave., Calumet City, Ill.; Michael Brillo, 17, 4820 Alcott St., East Chicago, Ind.; Patricia Penny, 17, 760 Jackson St., Gary, Ind.

Youth, Suspected Of Burglary, Shot

A Negro youth was wounded when caught leaving the Hilliard Street Grocery, 81 Hilliard St., N. E., and $123 in loot taken from the store was recovered, Atlanta police reported Sunday night.

Radio Patrolmen H. A. Gilbert and J. W. Anderson reported they saw the Negro, listed as Monroe Link, 17, of a North Avenue address, as he opened the front door of the grocery early Sunday and began running. Link threw a screwdriver at them, they reported, and Patrolman Anderson fired at the intruder, hitting him in the right leg.

Link was admitted to Grady Hospital. Police charged him with suspicion of burglary. Store owners said the $123 was taken from the cash register.

Father, Two Sons Perish in Flames

BENNINGTON, N. H., March 23 (UP)—A father and two small sons whom he tried desperately to save, perished Sunday when fire swept their two-story home.

The victims were William Cashian, 31, a mill worker, and his sons, Ronald, 4, and William, Jr., 3. Cashian's wife and 8-year-old daughter, Cynthia, leaped to safety from a second-story window.

When the fire broke out, Cashian dashed into the boys' room and attempted to drag them from the house. However, all three were overcome by smoke. The blaze which started from a defective oil burner in the kitchen, caused $5,000 damage.

Romanians Expecting United States Grain

BUCHAREST, Romania, March 23— (AP) —Romanian newspapers reported Sunday that a shipment of 17,000 tons of grain from the United States was expected to arrive in this country soon.

It was understood that arrangements for an American loan of $50,000,000 to buy American grain had run into a last-minute hitch, hinging on the ownership of Romanian gold now in Switzerland. The gold had been offered as security for the loan, but the question has been raised whether the gold was not Nazi loot, and thus liable for claims as reparations.

Sleeper Plane Sets New Record Coast-to-Coast

MIAMI, Fla., March 23—(UP) The first coast-to-coast flight of the new DC-6 sleeper plane set a non-stop commercial record Sunday with a 2,400-mile flight from Los Angeles to Miami in seven hours and 14 minutes.

The Douglas-made giant—first to be commercially licensed—took off from California at 6:34 a. m. (EST), and landed here at 1:45 p. m. (EST).

The best previous flight time was eight hours and five minutes set by a Constellation in March 1945. To beat this, the DC-6 averaged 332 m. p. h. at an altitude of 20,000 feet.

The 52-passenger plane, first of five ordered by Pan American-Grace Airways, will be put into service this Spring between Miami and Buenos Aires.

Driver Loses Control of Car, Fatally Hurt

Andrew B. Johnston, 22, of Route 1, Grayson, died early Sunday morning a few minutes after being admitted to Emory University Hospital from injuries received when his automobile overturned at Memorial Drive, near Hambrick Road.

DeKalb County Radio Patrolmen C. C. Booth and T. T. Wright said Johnston was driving east on Memorial Drive and attempting to pass a group of trucks. Suddenly, according to other passengers in the automobile, he became blinded by the lights of an oncoming vehicle and lost control of his car. It ran off the highway and turned over.

Other passengers in the automobile, James Johnston, E. H. Knight, Arthur Juban and J. C. Ford, all of Snellville, were not injured, police reported.

F. Q. Sammon Funeral Home at Lawrenceville is in charge of arrangements.

Shortly after the accident, Atlanta police reported an automobile driven by Melton B. Howard, 20, of Perry, struck a power pole as he was driving north in the 500 block on Whitehall Street. Howard, his wife, Sgt. L. S. Adams and Pvt. William Magro were treated for bruises at a local hospital and dismissed.

Radio Patrolmen Z. P. Akin and C. L. Jones charged Howard with reckless driving and accident.

'Phantom' Sniper Claims 9th Victim

Another in a series of "phantom shootings" directed against Negroes was reported Saturday with the admission of Tom McCoy, 21, Negro, of 1020 Smith St., S. W., to Grady Hospital for gunshot wounds.

McCoy, who told Radio Patrolmen L. O. Davis and J. B. Evans he could imagine no reason for anyone shooting him, said he was mounting the steps of his home early Sunday morning when he heard a loud blast and felt a pain in his left side. At Grady several shotgun pellets were removed from his body.

Eight similar shootings have reported in Atlanta during the Winter.

SEC Changes Plans On Utility Integration

By WELLINGTON WRIGHT

The Securities and Exchange Commission has made important changes in its pending plan for the integration of the Georgia Power Company and other Southeastern electric utility companies into a new holding organization, the Southern Company, with headquarters in Atlanta.

According to Walter R. McDonald, Chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission, these changes involve capitalization, reinvestment of earnings, a method to bring the book value of the operating companies into line with the fair market value, as allowed by SEC, and an agreement that the SEC values shall not become a basis for fixing rates. All these changes, said McDonald, will prove highly beneficial to the customers of Georgia Power Company and its associate companies in the new holding organization.

SEC agreed to these changes through an intervention by the Georgia Public Service Commission in the proceedings now before SEC. Hearings on these amended plans will begin before the SEC on Monday.

McDonald summarized the changes as follows:

1. An agreement by the Southern Company to set aside $2,000,000 a year from the consolidated earnings of its subsidiary companies until the book value of these companies, to be fixed at about $75,000,000, shall reach the level of the fair market value to be set at about $146,000,000.

2. An agreement that the sole capitalization of the Southern Company shall be 10,000,000 shares of common stock at $5 par value, plus a sufficient amount of such stock to raise $10,000,000 in cash. McDonald estimates the volume of the additional stock at between 700,000 and 800,000 shares.

3. An agreement that of the $10,000,000 so raised, not less than $5,000,000 shall be invested in the property of the Georgia Power Company.

4. Another agreement that none of the values fixed by SEC shall form the basis of a rate proceeding by any of the Southern's operating companies.

"These concessions are major victories for us," said McDonald. "They will prove of great value to the people of this area."

In the amended plan, however, the SEC still insists that Georgia Power Company divorce itself from the transportation business, and also that the South Carolina Power Company shall not become a part of the Southern Company's integrated system. The Georgia Power Company is still fighting these rulings.

Georgia Power operates the transportation systems of Atlanta, Macon, Augusta and Rome and, in addition, operated the gas system in Columbus. The people of those cities have filed protests against the order directing the Company to rid itself of its transport facilities.

"We are especially insistent that Georgia Power be allowed to operate the Atlanta transportation system," said McDonald. "Here, the electric power system and the transportation system are so highly integrated that it would not be in the public interest to divorce them."

By law, Georgia Power cannot divest itself of its transportation system without the consent of the Public Service Commission and McDonald indicated that, regardless of the SEC's ruling, it is unlikely that the Commission will give its consent to such divestment.

McDonald said that the agreement to invest $2,000,000 out of earnings in order to raise the book value of the operating companies was "highly important." Of this money, he said, the Southern Company will retain $500,000 a year for the purchase of the securities of its operating companies.

The other $1,500,000 is to be used by the operating companies each year for investment in plant facilities. McDonald now is insisting that SEC set up a pro rata basis for the distribution of this money among the operating companies. Besides Georgia Power, the other companies involved are Alabama Power, Mississippi Power and Gulf Power.

A supplementary statement covering these objections to the amended plan will be taken to Philadelphia for the SEC hearing Monday by Knowles Davis, rate expert for the Georgia Commission.

Planning Body To Study Zoning In 'Creek' Area

The Fulton County Planning Commission Tuesday will consider a proposal to extend by 200 feet the area zoned for apartments between Morosco Road, Lindbergh Drive and Peachtree Creek.

Planning Administrator Courtland Gilbert said Saturday that if the proposal is adopted he understood it would clear the way for the erection of 600 housing units.

The Commission also will consider on Tuesday a request by Thomas J. Tobias, representing the J. A. Alexander Estate, to establish a complete commercial-center of plaza design adjacent to the present business area at the corner of Peachtree Road and Sunnyside Drive.

A proposal to rezone the old James R. Gray property on Peachtree Road in Buckhead from a residential to a commercial area also will be taken up.

TO ATTEND FBI SCHOOL—Capt. W. L. Duncan, left, of the Fulton County Police Detective Bureau, and R. M. Emory U. 'Workshop' Set June 16-July 23

Emory University's 1947 Summer workshop for teachers, June 16 through July 23, will focus attention on problems of the community school and community needs, Dr. L. D. Haskew, Emory's Director of Teacher Education, announced.

Dr. Haskew said that Dr. John A. Dotson, Director of Curriculum for the Louisville, Ky., Public Schools and one of the nation's top authorities on the community school, will direct this year's workshop. Dr. Dotson will be assisted by specialists in both elementary and high school instruction. Teacher enrollment will be limited, Haskew added, so that instruction may be individualized.

U. S. and Britain Cold To Red Plea For Speedy Slash in Armaments

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., March 23—(UP)—Reports of a detailed Russian program for slashing national armaments swept through United Nations headquarters Sunday night on the eve of the UNO's first attempt to chart a course to worldwide disarmament.

Official confirmation of the reports was not obtainable, but American and British officials expected Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to lay some "concrete proposals" before the UNO's disarmament commission at its opening meeting Monday at 3 p. m. (EST).

Both the Americans and British were under orders to resist any Soviet attempt to begin scrapping arms in the near future.

Sir Alexander Cadogan of Great Britain and Deputy Delegate Herschel Johnson, of the United States were prepared to tell the UNO that no form of arms reduction will be possible until foolproof safeguards are established and the UNO has been built into a workable machine for maintaining peace. This would not mean negotiations should not begin.

The Anglo-American hesitation set the stage for a bitter propaganda battle with the Soviet Union, which took the initiative in proposing UN disarmament negotiations last year at the General Assembly and has pushed incessantly in the Security Council for speedy formation of the disarmament commission, officially labeled the commission on conventional armaments.

Gromyko, cast in a role similar to that filled by former Soviet Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff 20 years ago at the Geneva Disarmament Conferences, was expected to be first speaker at the 11-nation commission's first meeting.

Convinced that disarmament can be nothing more than a hope until the atom bomb is placed under international control and the UN's world police system is at work, Anglo - American officials displayed suspicion at Russia's pressing for disarmament at this time for two basic reasons:

1. They fear that the proposal for general disarmament now has been tossed into the UN by the Russians to obscure and perhaps sabotage the UN's atomic control negotiations. Of the countries which count, all but Russia have subscribed to the United States plan for strict control, inspection, development and management of the world's atomic energy facilities.

2. They believe the Russians are playing chiefly a propaganda game, intending to use disarmament as a means of grabbing and holding the ball in the UN while the United States and Britain are forced to play follow-the-leader.

To combat Gromyko's aggressive program, Britain's Cadogan was ready with a statement outlining Britain's policy on scrapping armaments. In substance, he will say that Britain always has been one of the countries which would benefit most from world disarmament, but that it will not consent to throwing away any weapons until a watertight world security system has been tested and proven.

NEWSMAN'S LYRICAL TRIBUTE

State Executive Suite Gains 3 Adroit Aides

By CELESTINE SIBLEY

"She's a newspaperman's dream of a Governor's secretary. . . . You can't make her mad and she won't get excited."

One of the glib newsmen who cover the Capitol voiced that description of Sarah Woodward Giles—and when she heard it, Acting Gov. Thompson's blue-eyed, brown-haired secretary knew she was getting something tantamount to the supreme compliment.

She inclined her head graciously, smiled at her admirer so radiantly he nearly fell off her desk and said simply: "Thank you, suh."

Sarah Giles, who will celebrate her first anniversary as Mrs. John Giles next Tuesday, is one of the three most attractive additions to the decor in the executive suite. The other two: Sara Davis (Mrs. Charles E. Davis), receptionist, and Ruby Robertson, secretary to Executive Secretary Phil Landrum.

OF AMIABLE DISPOSITION

All three of them, junior miss in size—and to all appearances, age — are pink-cheeked, bright-eyed lassies whose figures might justifiably draw wolf howls in less lofty circles but whose dispositions draw only kittenlike purrs from the roaring politicians who are darkening the Governor's doorway nowadays.

Sec. Sarah Giles and her co-workers aim to please the Capitol customers—and as late as Saturday there had been no complaints. The three of them seem to be blessed with a natural knack for remembering names and/or faces, juggling schedules to get the right number of right people in to see the Governor and making waiting or "I'm sorry, he's busy" as painless as possible for those who were left over. They worked in their three respective bowers of flowers with a determined gaiety that offset the funereal fragrance sent up by thousands of roses, hyacinths and carnations contributed by happy constitutents. They received countless telephone calls, a constant stream of visitors and opened and answered mail by the stack.

TWO ARE HOUSEWIVES

And at the end of the day two of them, Sarah Giles and Sara Davis, rushed home to tackle their housekeeping.

Mrs. Giles, a native of LaGrange and a graduate of LaGrange High School and Opportunity School, has sandwiched homemaking in a little apartment at 846 Ponce de Leon in between as hectic a stint as secretary as any girl could have. She has been with Thompson four years—before that she was in the office of Atty. Gen. Ellis Arnall—and in the last few months she has been either on duty or on call at any hour of the day or night.

"One night I was in the bathtub washing my hair and they called me to come to work," she reported cheerfully. "I put a turban on my wet hair, got into some clothes and came on. I like this kind of job—it's exciting and different."

Before she came to Atlanta and the Capitol, Mrs. Giles worked for a couple of years with Raymond W. (Chatty) Martin, LaGrange attorney. Her husband is with the Veterans' Administration.

"YOU WANT TO SEE THE GOVERNOR?"—It seems a pointless question with outer-office help like this around, but these are the young women you have to see before you see Hizzoner. Scenic assets to the Governor's suite are, left to right, Receptionist Sara Davis, Secretary-to-the-Secretary Ruby Robertson, and Acting Gov. Thompson's personal secretary, Sarah Woodward Giles.

The other Sara, Mrs. Charles Davis, is also an alumnus of the Arnall administration. She was in his office for two years and prior to that served in the Department of Education in the office of Dr. O. C. Aderhold. A native of Palmetto and a graduate of Palmetto High School, she lives there now on a farm with her husband's parents and their six-year-old son, Charlie.

"You should hear Charlie," said dimpled, fair-haired Mrs. Davis, smiling with a maternal pride belying her bobby socks youth. "He knows all about current events, will talk your ears off about politics—and can't spell cat!"

Slender, vivacious Ruby Robinson, self-styled "secretary to the secretary," is a native of College Park and joined Thompson's staff while he was Revenue Commissioner. Before that time she was a secretary in the Alcohol Control Department.

At present he is an altogether different man, feeling fine in every way.

JULY-WALKER FEUD FORGOTTEN

Fulton Hunters Engage in Manhunt; 15 Pedigreed Foxhounds Missing

The fox hunters of the Old Campbell section of Fulton County are giving the foxes a rest and with quiet fury are devoting their attention to a manhunt.

The electric chair, they think, is too good for the man they seek, for they believe the world's meanest thief has been among them for the last few weeks, stealing their pedigreed July and Walker foxhounds.

The feud between the owners of the Julys and Walkers as to which is the better dog has died down temporarily. All have joined forces in concentrating on running to his lair the man who would take advantage of a foxhound worn out after chasing the fox all night.

T. A. Poole, master of the hounds, complained to the County Police, who assigned Detectives H. J. Copeland and L. W. Cook to the case.

Poole reported six of his best dogs had been stolen. Others reporting loss of dogs are Neville and Clay McClure, of Fairburn; William Dodson, of Fairburn, and several other hunters residing in East Point and College Park. About 15 hounds, valued at $75 to $150 each, have disappeared.

No longer—except perhaps in England or Virginia—do fox hunters ride lickety split o'er hill and dale after Reynard singing, "Do ye ken, John Peel?" Down this way they set the fox loose and then the dogs. The hunters in automobiles follow along country roads what to them is the sweetest music ever heard—the baying of the foxhounds.

Sometimes they circle about all night, then turn homeward as the baying ceases, showing that br'er fox has either bit the dust or got away, or that the dogs have worn themselves out.

After a brief rest, the dogs generally return home by roads. The hunters think that the thief has been picking them up as they wend their way homeward.

Man on Phone Says His 'Friend' Killed Overells

PHILADELPHIA, March 23—(UP)—Police searched for a man who told California authorities on a long-distance telephone call that he saw a friend, now hiding in Philadelphia, kill Mr. and Mrs. Walter Overell aboard their yacht at Santa Ana, Cal.

The bodies of Walter Overell, 62, Los Angeles finance company executive, and his wife, Beulah, 57, were found aboard a dynamited yatcht. Police believe they were beaten to death with a hammer and the yacht dynamited to conceal the murder.

The couple's 17-year-old daughter, Beulah Louise, and her fiance, George R. Gollum, 21, were held for investigation in connection with the slayings.

In a $2 telephone call shortly before last midnight, a man, who gave his name as Edward Pierce and spoke with a German accent, telephoned Santa Ana police saying that the killer brought him to Philadelphia and was holding him captive.

"I saw my friend kill the Overells," the man said carefully. "He brought me here to Philadelphia. I am afraid he will kill me. I will write the Philadelphia police. I am calling so that the boy won't be tried for something he didn't do."

JAPS MUST KNOW THEIR VEGETABLES TO TRAVEL BRANCH LINE RAILROAD

YORII, Japan, March 23—(AP)—To get a railway ticket to certain places, travelers in this minor branch line transfer point some 50 miles northwest of Tokyo have only to shout "charcoal" or "potatoes" and hand over their yen.

There is a constant stream of city dwellers and small-time black market buyers who know what they want but don't know where to go for it. The ticket sellers keep track of such things and sell passage to the right points.

At the moment, "charcoal" means Chichibu, while "potatoes" will take the traveler either to Kumagaya or Kodama.

Voting Favors Phone Strike, Union Reports

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP) The National Federation of Telephone Workers Sunday reported votes running 15 to 1 in favor of a nationwide strike.

The Union convention last November fixed April 7 as a strike deadline, but it will be up to the Policy Committee of 49 members, beginning sessions here Monday, to decide if and when a strike is to be called.

The chief objective of the unaffiliated Union is a $12 weekly pay increase.

The complete strike vote probably will not be known until the Policy Committeemen report Monday. Balloting is being conducted by the 39 unions participating in the nationwide bargaining program. The Union has 10 other affiliates with representatives on the Policy group, but their contracts, where they have them, do not expire now.

The NFTW says 287,025 workers are in the bargaining units represented by the 39 unions. A strike by those affiliates would cripple telephone service throughout most of the nation.

Labor Department officials announced last week that every effort would be made to avert a strike.

Conciliation Director Edgar L. Warren said commissioners are working with negotiators in 30 cities.

Amish Flock Buys Tennessee Tract For Own School

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 23 (AP)—Fifteen families of the Amish Reformed Church near Berne, Ind., have purchased land in Lawrence County, Tenn., and plan to move here sometime next Summer because, they say, Indiana school laws are interferring with the practice of their religion.

The land is near Ethridge, Tenn., about 70 miles south of Nashville, said Enoch P. Habegger, a farmer who is serving as a pastor for the church.

He said members of the group are opposed to sending their children to public high schools and that Indiana law requires a student to attend school until he is 16 years old.

Tennessee law requires the same, but Habegger said permission had been granted the Amish families by the Lawrence County and Tennessee education officials to have their own parochial school with one of their own young people as a teacher.

H. H. Turpin, secretary of the Lawrence County School Board, said Habegger's permission had been obtained from State Education Commissioner Burgin E. Dossett. Dossett could not be reached Sunday for comment.

"They agreed to meet the requirements for schools in Tennessee, and said they would expect us to give them supervision," Turpin said.

COSTS HOTEL GUEST CASH TO 'EASE' ROOM SHORTAGE BY 'SHARING' BEDS

The proverb, "Lay ye not down with strangers," now has a new meaning for John Cash, of Gainesville.

Cash booked a room with two beds in a downtown hotel Saturday, left for a few hours, and returned to find a sleeping stranger occupying one of the beds, Detectives B. E. Blair and H. D. Henshaw related. Cash considered the room shortage, mistakenly thought the management had put someone in with him, and went trustingly to sleep.

He awoke Sunday morning to find the stranger and $60 missing.

And, to add insult to injury, a dirty shirt had replaced his clean one.

'S O S'—No Ship Sighted

PETERHEAD, Scotland, March 23—(AP)—A lifeboat from this port returned from an eight-hour search Sunday night reporting it could find no trace in the dense fog of an unidentified ship that signalled it was in distress five miles off Buchan Ness, Scotland. The Radiomarine Corporation in New York said the ship was believed to be either the SS Colleague or the SS Afghanistan.

COLD BREAKFAST, HOT DINNER

Canadian Dental Expert Finds It's Hot in Atlanta

Atlantans may not agree, but Dr. Charles H. M. Williams, D.D.S., B.Sc., thinks Spring in all its glory is here.

In fact, Dr. Williams said Sunday it is hot.

Dr. Williams suffered from the heat because he had breakfast Saturday morning during a heavy snowstorm at his home in Toronto, Canada. Saturday night he dined with friends in Atlanta.

Met at the airport here by Dr. Edwin C. Pound, President of Atlanta's Fifth District Dental Society, Dr. Williams is one of the seven of the nation's dental authorities who are in Atlanta to address dentists of the Southeast at the Thomas P. Hinman Dental Clinic, which opens a two-day session this morning at the Municipal Auditorium.

Dr. Williams is associate professor in the Department of Periodontology at the University of Toronto, and is considered one of the world's outstanding authorities on pyorrhea.

While here, Dr. Williams will explain in an illustrated lecture the newest technique in combatting pyorrhea.

"New methods of treating pyorrhea are very successful, and it gives me great pleasure to make the absolute statement that pyorrhea can be arrested," he said.

Seven dental authorities in various fields of dental work will participate in the two-day clinic, which has attracted to Atlanta about 800 dentists from all parts of the South.

Others taking part on the program are Dr. J. F. Volker, professor of Clinical Dentistry and Director of Clinics at Tufts College; Dr. Vincent R. Trappozzano, professor of Clinical Prosthetic Dentistry, University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Edward C. Dobbs, Director of the Department of Pharmacology and Oral Therapeutics, Baltimore, College of Dental Surgery; Dr. Hamilton B. G. Robinson, professor of Oral Pathology and Diagnosis, Ohio State University; Dr. Walter C. McBride, Director of Children's Dentistry, University of Detroit, and a lecturer, Post Graduate Division, University of Michigan, and Dr. Reed O. learned biologists, they retreated in the face of scientific fact.

Since that day Dr. Rogers' camera has scored many additional firsts in birdlife photography and he is now recognized as one of the country's outstanding ornithologists, the co-author of three books on birds and their lives.

With two CCC boys holding his legs, he hung head down from a scarp on Brasstown Bald to get the only photograph ever made of a raven nesting in Georgia.

Only three Swainson warblers, a rare bird, have been sighted in Georgia. Dr. Rogers photographed one of them. His photograph of the blackbill cuckoo, on a Georgia nest, is the only one on record.

In 1920 he co-operated with the late Dr. W. H. LaPrade to get a robin nesting in Atlanta. That was a "first," for robins, up until that time, didn't nest here. Now they nest by the thousands.

The rare Bachman's sparrow, a dove's nest on the ground, the Baltimore oriole nesting in Georgia; these and other unusual recordings have come from the camera of Dr. Rogers, who, by the way, considers The Constitution's projected Photographic Clinic to be the best thing that has happened in Georgia photography in his experience.

While the pictures of Dr. Rogers have added to man's general scientific knowledge, those of Drake have contributed to his pleasure and to his cultural advancement.

His picture-making career was lauched by an Atlanta clothing store, in 1903, when he received a little square box camera with a suit of clothes. He's had a camera swung around his neck ever since.

As long ago as 1914 Drake's photographs were winning salon awards. That year he became the first Southerner ever to have his work exhibited in London's Royal Photographic Salon. The photograph, titled "Iron Horses," is considered one of the best railroad pictures ever made.

Rarely going anywhere without not one but several cameras, Drake trains them on Nature's beauty, capturing on film the pictorial delights of the universe. He usually gives the pictures to friends or to schools and other public institutions so that they might be enjoyed by others.

Photographing children brings him as much pleasure, he says.

Mr. Drake's wife shares her husband's enthusiasm for photography and they work together as a team, she majoring in color work. They're both experts in the lore of firearms, too, and crack pistol and rifle shots.

Friends like to tell about the time Drake "shot" Atlanta from a runaway balloon. Loaded with camera equipment he boarded one of those early "hot air" balloons to get an airview of the City.

The balloon was supposed to be held captive by a rope and when it kept going up and up, Drake turned to his companion and asked if he didn't think they had gone high enough.

"Look at that rope," his companion said. "It's dangling."

Drake and his companion finally were landed safely when the rope got tangled in trees out in the Kirkwood section. In the excitement, he failed to get a picture—one of the few he ever missed.

Both Dr. Rogers and Drake are honorary lifetime members of the Atlanta Camera Club.

war. Many letters thanked the guard of honor for its perpetual tribute to the soldier who represents all American soldiers.

Four guards always are on duty—one walking in front of the tomb, the other three in the Amphitheater. Each soldier walks post one hour and rests two hours for 12 hours the day. Then he gets 24 hours off, followed by 12 hours of night duty—two hours marching, four hours resting.

The guards are carefully picked men, assigned to this duty for an indefinite period. Only disorderly conduct or a discharge from the Army will take them from this coveted assignment.

Each must wear dark glasses to prevent eyestrain from the constant glare of snow or sun and to keep him from becoming too self-conscious as they watch the visitors.

Those visitors number thousands every year. Most are quiet, subdued and respectful. Some kneel at the tomb and pray, or just bow their heads. And all of them gaze solemnly at the tomb and feel a moment of peace in a world of atomic bombs and hunger and riots and quarreling diplomats five thousand miles away.

And they look at the words on the tomb—words that in themselves are a prayer against war:

"Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God."

SENTENCE SUSPENDED!

NEW YORK, March 23—(UP)—The normal Sunday morning quiet of exclusive Roslyn, L. I., was broken early Sunday with abusive language and screams of "rape" emanating from a top-drawer socialite running madly along Nassau Boulevard clothed only in half-slip and brassiere.

The Blue Book number involved in the early morning sprint was Maude Stevenson, 26-year-old daughter of Polo Player Malcolm Stevenson and divorced wife of O. Gifford West, Jr., a social registrite. The unprecedented little episode, police said, climaxed Maude's visit to a former boy friend's yacht, where she "just naturally raised hell"—to quote the boy friend.

Robert Henjes, 25, assisted by the Captain of his yacht, brought the kicking, screaming and half-clothed Miss Stevenson into Roslyn police station at 3:10 a. m. Her lack of clothing wasn't explained but Henjes did explain that Maude was in a destructive mood and it had been a case of bringing her to police station or losing a good yacht.

While Henjes was talking, the disheveled Miss Stevenson emitted a super-shriek and took off in the general direction of Nassau Boulevard, sans shoes, dress, hat etc. Henjes wisely disappeared.

Patrolman Thomas J. O'Reilly, who sustained an injury in the last war, was no match for Maude, whose mad dash was accompanied by such un-Rosyln-like language as "I'm being raped!"

O'Reilly hailed a passing motorist and finally cornered his quarry in an automobile parking lot. On his first lunge at the elusive Maude he came back with the . . . er . . . bra, but no Miss Stevenson. An appreciative early morning audience gave him no lack of encouragement.

On his second stab at the biting, kicking Miss Stevenson, O'Reilly got a hold on the half-slip. Probably remembering what happened with the bra, he let go as she lunged away.

It wasn't until two more policemen arrived on the scene that the screaming socialite was taken into custody.

Back at Roslyn Police Station, Miss Stevenson made an embarrassed group of cops even more embarrassed when she refused any clothing but her own, which finally was brought from Henjes' yacht.

She came into court fully clothed several hours later and pleaded guilty to a disorderly conduct charge before District Judge Albert C. Moore, who gave her a suspended sentence.

Maude then went back to the family estate at Westbury, L. I., and normal quiet descended again on Roslyn.

Solons Favor Vote Aid To Purge Order

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP) Congressmen bent on ousting any Government employees of questionable loyalty proposed Sunday to use their power over the purse-strings to make President Truman's "purge" order stick.

They said they favor withholding appropriations, to a greater extent than ever before, to force the dismissal of officials whose views and actions they consider questionable.

Already the House Appropriations Committee has refused to provide funds to continue Edgar L. Warren in office as Director of the Conciliation Service, and committee members expect the House to uphold the action this week. They said Warren acknowledged past membership in organizations which the Committee on un-American Activities called "Communist-inspired fronts," although Warren insisted he had no knowledge of the nature of the groups and has since resigned from them.

Now some House members are talking about denying the funds for David E. Lilienthal to function as Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission if the Senate confirms his nomination as expected this week.

Rep. Cox, Democrat, Georgia, declaring he favors blocking the Lilienthal appointment by any means, told a reporter he would oppose appropriations and funds to pay Lilienthal's salary. Cox is a member of the powerful Rules Committee.

Plans, Models, Loan Charts For Home Show

Home plans, model homes and home financing will be featured at the Atlanta National Home Show at the Municipal Auditorium April 5-9, Pres. David J. Nicholes, of the Home Builders' Association of Atlanta said Sunday.

Information booths and exhibits will be maintained for visitors to the five-day show by the Federal Housing Administration, the Veterans' Administration, the League of Building and Loan Associations, the Atlanta Real Estate Board and the Atlanta Title Company, Nicholes said.

Sponsored by the Home Builders' Association and produced by the Curry National Home Shows, the Atlanta National Home Show will offer prospective home builders a panoramic view of the latest and soundest in building practices, materials and appliances.

"The show is being tailormade for folks who want to see and investigate the best the American home building industry can produce before they build for themselves," Nicholes said. "A thorough inspection of the many exhibits at the Atlanta National Home Show will enable a prospective home-owner to get the most for his money, both in dollar value and in happier living."

The show will be open each day from 2 p. m. until 11 p. m.

How Much Higher?

Mill and Factory, which is one of the better trade magazines, has polled 1,000 executives of all varieties and sizes of manufacturing plants and come up with some answers important to consumers as well as the retailer and jobber.

It is a frank report and one of value.

Forty-four percent of the industrial management interviewed replied they believed their prices, and those of industry in general, too high.

They gloomily admit they don't know what to do about it.

A full 61 percent state their prices are higher now than they were last November when price controls were removed. Only 15 percent believe their prices will be lower this Summer.

Fifty-two percent, or about half, do not believe there will be a recession or depression. But the fact that 48 percent do believe, or are afraid so, is an indication of just how confused industrial management is, what with war talk still in the air and inventories still containing high-priced goods and products.

Forty-nine percent do not see how they can reduce prices, even with technological advances, as long as wages remain at their present level.

Meanwhile, economists see no recession this year. They do not see any decrease in cost of living except an occasional erratic drop, as in the case of butter.

A solid period of high employment is predicted. On-the-site construction labor demand is increasing weekly and this may drain off maintenance workers from plants as the demand increases. There is, surveys show, a decline in the "quit" rate, but it still is running four times as heavy as in 1939.

Expressing confidence in the belief that American industry is still an expanding one is the fact that manufacturers are buying and ordering new equipment at a greater rate than anticipated.

Order in our economy may come sooner than predicted.

The Beginning of Home Rule

Those who are saying that the legislative session just ended was completely unproductive overlook the fact that, in the closing hours and by a very close vote, the General Assembly passed Rep. Charles Gowen's permissive home rule bill for municipalities.

To be sure, over fifty counties were exempted from the measure by their Representatives. But these can be included at a later date when solons more amenable to the public will have been elected from them.

The main thing is that finally Georgia has made a beginning on the long-needed reform.

The greater part of the recent 70-day, $360,000 session was taken up with local bills.

Moreover, the people of the entire State are going to be put to the expense of voting on more than 30 local measures which require constitutional amendments. That is to say, elections are going to have to be held in each of 159 counties on such purely local questions as whether or not the Bibb County and City of Macon Health Departments are to be consolidated and whether or not the Spalding County Board of Education shall be composed of ten members.

The new State Constitution specifically directs that the Legislature shall provide permissive home rule for both cities and counties.

Cities in more than 100 counties have now been given it, but the county bill never had a chance, most Legislators being particularly reluctant to give up their virtually unlimited power in that field.

Still, we have made a start in the right direction. And that is highly encouraging to those of us who like to think our legislative processes are indeed democratic and representative.

Fulton County's New 'AA' Rating

News that investment rating bureaus have raised Fulton County's credit rating from A to Double A is a matter for gratification on the part of all.

For it means that the $20,000,000 bond issue for postwar improvements will now bring their face value, instead of having to be sold at a discount.

There was never any reason, of course, why the County should not have had the highest possible rating, since it is a well-operated government with no outstanding debentures and an excellent fiscal record.

Mr. Smith Goes to the Capitol

In reviewing the legislative session just concluded, we think that Fulton County may justly be proud of the job done by its freshman representative, M. M. (Muggsy) Smith.

It was his first session. Yet we do not recall any Representative in many years who went about the task of living up to what he conceived to be his responsibilities with any more refreshing forthrightness, vigor and intelligent action. He stepped on a few toes, as who does not? Yet he did so openly and only because he would not be deterred from what he believed to be his duty. Even those who disagree with him admit as much.

Rep. Smith is the sort of young man we need in public office. We trust that all good citizens of Fulton County will, even though they may be among those who did not agree with all his acts, appreciate him for what he is—a fine young man willing to give himself to public office in the best meaning of that phrase.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words. We regret no letters can be returned.

More To Come

Editor Constitution: Not too much concerned about truth, honor and integrity, some members of the press are groveling in remorse, shame and despair. They predicted Herman Talmadge, would, by force of arms, take over the State Government, throw out all the constitutional employees who happened to be of the opposite camp and create chaos in the State Capitol. They predicted him as a tyrant, race baiter, radical, reactionary, rude, rough, academically and politically unlearned.

The readers whose intellect has been underrated and whose intelligence has been insulted, investigated, discovered, doubted, and then scorned the press and its false propaganda. Herman Talmadge was not a radical, reactionary, or rowdy. He is an educated, cultured, refined and conservative gentleman. He, a veteran of World War II, is faithful and progressive in peace as he was in war. Herman Talmadge, in and out of Georgia, is making friends.

When, for him, the Supreme Court decided the governorship issue adversely he conducted himself in the same orderly and genteel manner that has characterized his private and public life. The people of Georgia will hear more of this splendid young man.

Churchill for President

Editor Constitution: Have been reading in your paper what Sen. Russell had to say about good old England. For this last month we have been a little down in the dumps, but certainly not out, and a long way from it. Do you remember us in 1941 when every one of us was ready to tackle any invader who dare set foot on our shore—well, the same spirit still prevails, and although I am not a Socialist, we all know that for the good of our country we must all do our duty during the crisis.

No, dear Richard, the British Empire will not break up; you can bet your bottom dollar on that, for the same hardworking people are here who built it, and those are the independent ones who will pull it through. But this period is just a piece of cake to what we have gone through. We are sure of the successful ending.

Probably it is lucky for us we don't have the luxuries you enjoy in your cities such as electrical gadgets, rich foods not to mention the attention your menfolks appear to shower on your women (well, not since the American boys went home; we enjoyed it then).

Richard, you shouldn't put your dreams into print, but there is one suggestion I would like to make to you: put Winston Churchill up for President and then there is no telling what would happen. I would certainly become an American citizen and train my son to be a good one, too.

Don't get cross with me, please, because as I write I haven't a piece of coal in the house. We are frozen up; cannot buy potatoes, nylons and lots of other things. Have to queue for anything worthwhile, but we still have a sense of humor.

Preference for Vets?

Editor Constitution: I did not read your editorial on "Veterans Get a Break in Civil Service," but I did read the letter of Mr. Joe Mackus in the Pulse of the Public in March 14 issue. I do not know Mr. Mackus but I can certainly state that the last two paragraphs of his letter are absolutely correct.

I presume by his letter he is employed by the Federal Government or the Civil Service Commission as he knows what he is writing about. I have noticed the attitude my employer, a branch of the Federal Government, has taken in the replacing of veterans to their former jobs. I have seen cases where a man held a job under a so-called permanent rating and returned from service to find he had been demoted in pay status and seniority. This lower job he was offered upon return or he had his option of resigning, which wasn't much of a choice.

This, mind you, has all happened under the nose and jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission. A referral to the Civil Service Commission will get no action, only a promise to investigate the case.

I must say the Civil Service Commission is really the veterans' friend. The Commission has seen us get even less than what the law says we are entitled to in the way of re-employment rights so that the old boys can be taken care of when the big chop comes.

RALPH McGILL

A Gentleman And a Fox Hunter

I read that Alpha Fowler, Jr., had been named as Adjutant General for the newly established State administration.

It is gratifying to me how friends turn up in that job. Lindley Camp was one, and Marvin Griffin, among others, and now young Fowler. He is a fine young man who may, if he continues his interest in politics, be a very real prospect for Governor a decade from now. I got to know him in the days when he was a leader in vocational agriculture work and very active in the Future Farmers of America program. He was a star in the vocational agriculture picture, "The Green Hand." I knew him, too, at the University of Georgia.

It hardly seemed possible to me that he was old enough to go off to war.

But he went. Like the others.

I used to see his old man around town with the little lines of strain around his mouth that all fathers and mothers had in those days.

The boy was a B-17 pilot in Italy. And in a busy sector.

Awards He went through it all, with a lot of Georgia boys in his squadron going through it with him. He was lucky. Once he had two of four engines shot out. Another time he had a shrapnel burst in the cockpit cut away part of his flying glove on one hand. His suit was ripped with machinegun bullets, the vicious 50-caliber kind. The 50-caliber gun was, to my way of thinking, the most wicked weapon of the war. Once the oxygen system was blasted out of his ship. Like others, he had it tough, but was lucky.

I'm not sure about decorations. I know he has nine battle stars, the Distinguished Flying Cross, two silver stars with clusters, two presidential citations and other decorations. He'll do.

He is about 25 now, I'd guess. If he ever gets around to wanting to run for Governor in the years ahead, I hope I am around. I'll ask to be one of those in his corner.

His Old Man He will have to be very careful, though, about his Old Man in this job as Adjutant General.

His Old Man is a fox hunter and July-hound man.

If the time should ever come when there is disorder enough to use the militia, the Old Man will urge him to call out a pack of July hounds instead of a squadron of soldiers.

When the family goes to a symphony concert, the Old Man stays at home and sits by the kennel listening to his hounds howl.

He chiseled the family motto from the court of arms and had written in its place: "Qui me amat, amat et canem meum."

His favorite bit of poetry is from Pope's "Essay On Man," which reads:

"He asks no angel's wing, no seraph's fire,
He thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful hound shall bear him company."

When you meet with a July-hound man you have met with a stubborn man. Only stubborn men own July hounds. They will not admit the plain truth, which is that a Walker hound will outlast, outtrail and outfinish a July hound any time the chips are down. A Walker hound can take up a trail two days after a July has quit it and follow it to where the fox has holed out. This is a well-known fact, but the July-hound fanciers will not admit it, being, as I said, a stubborn breed, unwilling to admit the truth when they meet it in the middle of the big road.

So, they will have to watch the Old Man. He will be trying to have the new Adjutant General substitute foxhorns for bugles in the Guard band.

But, even so, it is a fine choice. There are a lot of fine Georgia boys, but none finer than Alpha Fowler, Jr.

Music Fox-hound people are the salt of the earth anyhow, even July-hound men, and there is nothing wrong with them except they are unduly stubborn. My six Walker hounds I left behind in Tennessee almost 20 years ago have long since gone to the happy hunting ground where the red fox are plentiful and there are day and night chases. But, just the other day I got a letter that the great-great-grandson of one had beat a July hound in a race.

There is music in a pack, especially when the nights are crisp or when they are warm and sultry or medium. And to a fox hunter the foxhorn has the same sort of appeal that the skirl or the pipes have for a Scot or an Irishman from the back hills.

I recall the National Fox Trials back in the twenties when they were held at Dawson Springs, Ky. (A Walker hound won it.) The night after the National foxhorn blowing contest, the winner, a gentleman named Mr. Wildcat Stevens, was in a hotel room where a celebration of Mr. Stevens' prowess with the horn was in progress. There was considerable song and wassail, as they say, and finally a window across the way was flung up and a plaintiff voice profanely asked:

"What in the blank blank are you doing over there?"

"Why," said Mr. Wildcat Stevens, sticking his head out of his own window, his horn clutched in one hand with the echo of a championship blast still in it, "we are blowing foxhorns and drinking whiskey. What in the world did you think we were doing?"

That classic remark has come ringing down the halls of taverns, wherever fox hunters gather and hot bricks are served at dawn.

Anyhow, we've got another fine adjutant general.

A soldier, a gentleman and a fox hunter.

RALPH T. JONES

Is This Foreglimpse Of City of Future?

MIAMI—Prophets of the world as it will be a century or two hence have all stressed one very obvious fact. That is, as transportation grows easier, quicker, the area of our cities will increase, with a corresponding lessening of the congestion in the central parts. As a matter of fact, cities as a grouping together of homes may cease to be. The people, able easy to reach places of employment daily from homes many miles away, will probably make their homes on little pieces of land in what we now call the open country, the rural areas

Already, as everyone knows, the coming of the automobile, superseding the slow horse as a means of individual transportation—together with improvements in means of popular mass transportation—has resulted in sending a large proportion of city residents to live in suburbs or outside areas.

We experience that in Atlanta, where so many of our citizens live in what we designate as "Greater Atlanta," where the shrinkage of proportionate revenue from the city proper is making it more and more difficult to finance needed public services.

I think it is even more evident in Miami, a city more recently created.

Greater Miami Greater Miami, they tell me, has a population of about 350,000.

Miami proper must have, if the visitors who reside in the innumerable hotels and rooming houses and tourist courts are subtracted, a comparatively small resident population. For there are so many suburbs, each independent corporations, I haven't yet been able to enumerate them.

I have been living for the past couple of weeks in North Miami, a corporation with its own city hall, city government, public utilities, etc. It is, from here, about 10 miles to the heart of Miami proper.

Driving into the city, though, you pass through a succession of little places, each independent, yet each counting itself part of Greater Miami. There come, in rapid succession, the signs which inform you you are entering, or leaving Miami Shores, Little River, Biscayne Park, etc. And beyond us, farther away from the city itself, are several other little units of Greater Miami.

To the south it is the same and, presumably, to the west.

Wide Spaces As you drive through these various corporations you see the exact reverse of congestion. Wide streets and boulevards. Parks and landscaped open areas. Picturesbook houses of white or pink or cream stucco. Not crowded, each in its own setting of green grass and tropical verdure.

Such a place would, of course, have been impossible before the advent of the automobile and its universal use. It would be impossible to live so far from the civic center of things if you had to ride a horse, or drive said horse hitched to a buggy, to get to your store or office every day.

Just as, in the horse era, Inman Park, as a place of residence, was an outlying area of Atlanta. Why, in those days Inman Park was, in time measurement, as far from Five Points as is Roswell today.

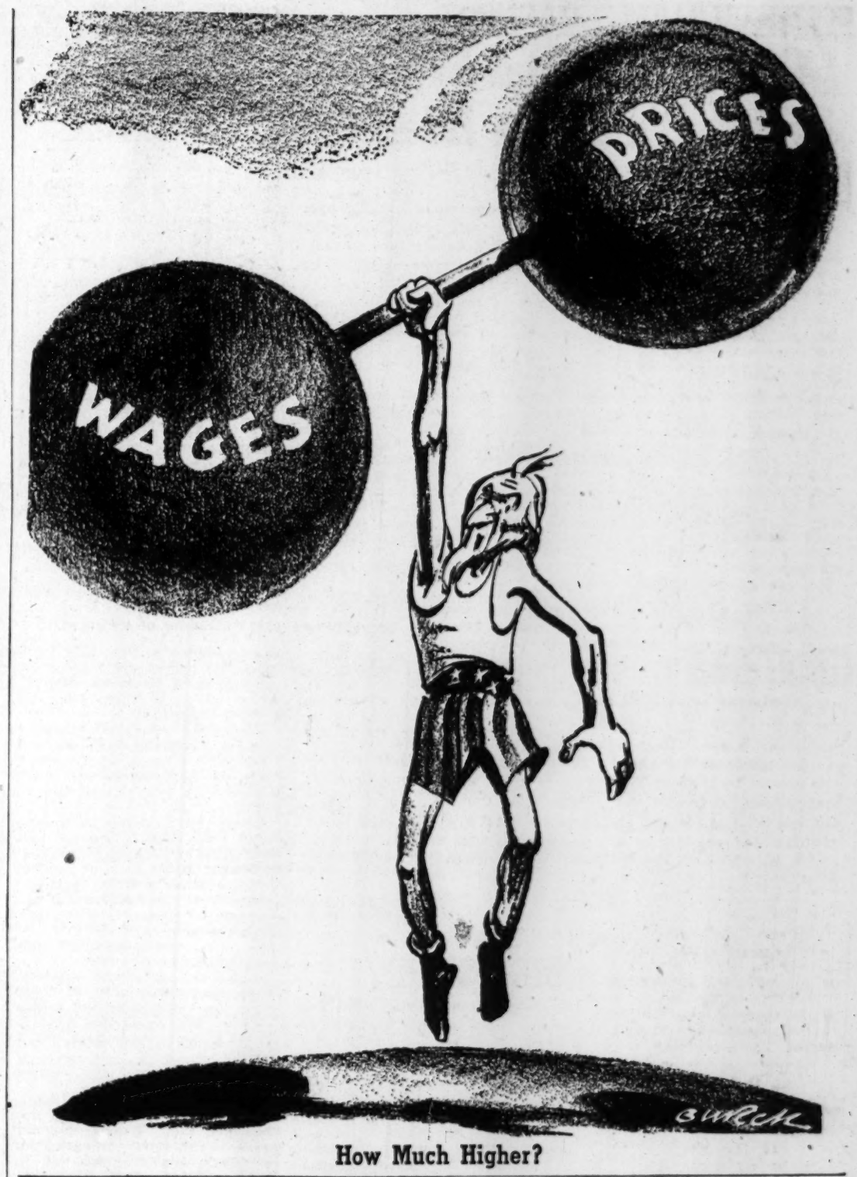

Well, the automobile has done all this. It will continue that same influence.

But there is coming a transportation agency which will do, in the way of scattering homesites, to the automobile age what it has done to the horse era. I mean the coming of the popular, almost universally owned, individually operated airplane.

When a man can take off from his own home place in an air sedan and land on the roof of an office building in the heart of the city—50 miles away—in 15 minutes, lots of folks will build their homes 50 miles or more away from the city scenes of business.

Cities to Go? Perhaps the cities will, save as focal centers of local government, amusements and cultural activities and such things, go entirely. Industry may, like residential areas, spread all over the countryside. Certainly retail business will, in large degree, follow its customers, the homemakers and home-keepers.

It is a fascinating place to contemplate the world of the future. If we don't go crazy and destroy it all with atom bombs or some other form of that insanity we call war.

Monopoly Is a Menace

When a rich man spends $10,000 for a party to launch the social career of his daughter, people who call themselves liberals usually regard it as a crime against humanity.

But they are wrong. So far as the public's welfare is concerned, the best thing a rich man can do with his money, assuming that he came by it honestly, is to spend it.

Indeed, every man must spend in proportion to his income—must somehow put back into circulation what he takes from the community—in order to provide his rightful share of the economic power that keeps the wheels turning.

THE MAN who spends $10,000 for a party divides it among many people—caterers, waiters, florists, musicians and such, and back of these the many who produced, processed, transported and sold the things he used.

(Of course, if he had banked the money, it might have been rented to others who would have put it into circulation. But the miser who hides his money in a safety deposit box makes the whole community that much poorer.)

Any place or section prospers in proportion to the amount of money it keeps in circulation.

If a million dollars is divided among 500 workers, they may buy 500 suits and support a clothing store. But if one man gets the million, he will not buy 500 suits. If the 500 men have families, they will support a number of small merchants and professional men, but the one man cannot support a single business.

IN ENGLAND, in normal times there were many small villages surrounded by large estates, and all of them were poor and backward and without hope of growth or progress.

You may find similar examples in America. In a section where farms or ranches are big, the towns are small and poor. Another section with the same climate and soil, but divided into small farms, has larger and more prosperous towns. It is a matter of simple arithmetic. Though the two groups make exactly the same total profit, a thousand farmers will buy more stuff than a hundred farmers.

That is the simple explanation of the economic troubles we are inviting—and already having in some sections—as a result of ever-increasing monopoly.

Business and industry must grow and expand. That is what built America. But bigness can become a menace, and in time ruin itself. Concentrate too much wealth in a few hands—let business grow too big—and it will begin to shrivel for want of prosperous customers. And if the few are absentee owners, who remove the profits from the community, they will in time make any place or region poor and keep it so.

The camel kneels at the beginning of the day to have his load placed on his back. He kneels at noon to have his load adjusted. He kneels at the close of the day to have his load lifted off. Each kneeling is essential to successful journeying. The burdens we bear will be carried lightly if our kneeling is similarly directed. God does not suffer us to be overborne. Yielding to His counsel we are enabled to run and not grow weary, to walk and not faint. Best of all, we find the refreshings of His spirit our unfailing joy.

Now It's the Indian Who'll Get Scalped

The Minnesota Legislature has removed the ban on the sale of whiskey to Indians.

Now the red man can get feathered again.

Originally passed in fear that, sufficiently fortified with firewater, the Indian might get ideas about taking back the country, the law plainly is no longer needed. He couldn't get that drunk.

The Indian was once considered a public ward who had to be protected by the government from exploitation and hangovers. There's no need worrying about anyone taking advantage of the modern redskin, as anyone can testify who has ever bought a blanket from him.

The Indian has long since been accepted as an American citizen. As such, he is entitled to all our rights, privileges and intoxicants.

Of course, once he finds out what they're charging for drinks these days, he's liable to go back on the warpath.

The Indians sold New York for $24 worth of trinkets and three barrels of whiskey. At today's prices, they drove a hard bargain.

GEORGIA EDITORS SAY

On the Supreme Court Decision

(CEDARTOWN STANDARD)

The court has spoken. It now remains for all factions to adjust themselves to the new order, forgetting past differences and uniting in a determination to work for the best interests of the State. A new Governor will be chosen next year. Who that man will be will be determined by the voters of the State in a special election to be held under the State—not the so-called white primary rules.

(MARIETTA JOURNAL)

Georgia started back on the long road toward decency when the Supreme Court ordered Herman Talmadge ousted from the Governor's office which he forcibly and illegally seized a little more than two months ago.

(SAVANNAH MORNING NEWS)

The fact that the elder Talmadge died before he was inaugurated, instead of later in his term, should not alter the fact that Thompson was the people's choice for Governor in the event of Talmadge's death. The Supreme Court in reaching the decision that Thompson was entitled to the position without a doubt took into consideration the intent of the voters in the State-wide election last year.

(ATHENS BANNER HERALD)

While the Supreme Court was concerned only with the legal angles of the dispute, we feel that a vast majority of Georgia laymen, perhaps not so well versed in jurisprudence, are of the opinion that, conceding the Legislature even had the right to elect, the highest office in the gift of the people should never have been given over to one whose only claim was 675 write-in votes cast by party bolters—this irrespective of the qualifications of the one thus elected.

(COLUMBUS LEDGER)

We do not conceive this to be a personal victory for Melvin E. Thompson. It is a victory for the people of Georgia whose cause he represented in fighting the case through to its ultimate conclusion.

(AUGUSTA CHRONICLE)

Now all of Georgia knows that Herman Talmadge was never Governor-in-fact. He was always the pretender, and his acts are all void. His two months of pretense in office were months of terrible waste, the total cost of which will be hard to appraise.

We do not believe it will be the mood of Georgians to forget this waste—or to forget the sinister plottings of Roy Harris, Bob Elliott, et al—when the 1948 elections roll around. Maybe they will elect Herman Talmadge; maybe they won't. That remains to be seen.

(CLAXTON ENTERPRISE)

Georgia now has only one Governor, instead of the two we were sporting until the Supreme Court rendered its decision. Most saddened by this state of affairs are the Talmadge supporters and the radio comedians.

(MACON NEWS)

Herman Talmadge has already served notice that he will carry his fight to the people, meaning that he will be a candidate for Governor in 1948. By that time the reactionary waves in Georgia's turbulent political waters will have receded; prejudice and hatred, demogoguery and chicanery will, we believe, have given way to fair play, reason and justice.

Let us rejoice that justice has triumphed again through the instrumentality of the State's highest tribunal, the Supreme Court. But, let us not forget that the fight has just begun and the present triumph is but another battle won in a war between two political ideologies.

(BULLOCH TIMES)

It is a great day for Georgia when the Supreme Court comes to the rescue and declares that, whatever of vagueness there may be in the wording of laws concerning the recent situation, Georgia lawmakers did not intend to create a means by which a Governor could be elected by stealth.

(BARTOW HERALD)

We firmly believe that if the people of Georgia should ever want Talmadge to be Governor, they will do so at the polls in an orderly and sensible manner. We are happy that the Supreme Court decision will settle once and for all the question as to the Legislature's right to elect a Governor. We are happy that the Supreme Court has made it impossible for any man or group of men to steal the office, which is the highest the people can give, away from them.

HAROLD MARTIN

Snowbound On Wheels

If this one makes sense it will be a miracle, for I'm trying to write it in the middle seat of a station wagon, with the typewriter on my lap, and every time Jim—Jim Furniss, up in the driver's seat—goes around a curve, the typewriter starts to slide and I hit the wrong key and then have to grab the machine to keep it from sliding off on the floor.

It's one of those trips that come up on the spur of the moment. Jim just happens to stop by the desk late yesterday afternoon and say: "Want to go to Washington?", and I say, "Washington where—Georgia or D. C.?", and he says, "D. C." Well, I've got to go to Washington pretty soon anyway, and I figure now is as good a time as any, so I say O. K., and call up Butch, for I've promised that next time I go on a trip she can go too.

"Oh, Lord," she says, a little querulously. "When? Now?"

"Of course not," I say. "Early in the morning. You've got plenty of time."

The Hitch "Why do you always give me such short notice?" she said. "Why can't we ever plan a trip and get all ready and go like other people, instead of always shoving off as if we are fleeing from a posse?"

"All right, all right," I said. "I'll go on and you go next time."

"I'll go THIS time," she said. "Next time, will be the same way. Come on home. But stop by the cleaners' and get my black suit. It's probably being cleaned, but they can find it. It's the one with the little round collar and the covered button at the waist. The jacket hangs straight and flares out a little bit over the hips."

"Look," I said. "You call them and tell them all that stuff——"

"My goodness!" she said. "Can't you do ANYTHING?. All I've got to do is get somebody to take the children to school in the morning, and somebody to stay with them until we get back, and call Miss Millie and tell her I can't get my hair fixed in the morning, and get Marion a ride to the dentist Thursday——"

"O. K., O. K.," I said. "How many colored buttons did the thing have?"

"Covered, not colored. One, I told you. And it flares out over the hips."

"What? The button?"

"The coat, stupe."

Molting So I get the suit and go home. She is knee-deep in suit cases and hat boxes and all the gear that women put in them, looking as if she is leaving for good instead of only four days, and I am willing to bet she will never get all the stuff packed. But she does.

So Jim comes by this morning, only half an hour late, and we are only 45 minutes from being ready, and finally we shove off. The AAA people have said that the route by Gainesville, Charlotte, Lynchburg and Charlottesville is the best, because it is only 711 miles and is clear of ice and snow all the way.

It was clear of snow for 40 miles, all right, but short of Gainesville the big drops of rain which had been beating against the windshield started looking slushy and grainy, and all at once they begin to crystallize into white, and we drove into Gainesville in a fall of snow like the one in Paris that night that led Francois Villon to observe that the heavenly geese were molting.

In the drugstore at Gainesville an old character full of years peered out at the blowing white and observed helpfully, "Last time it started like this we got 10 inches."

At first the white flakes melted as fast as they hit the rain-soaked earth, but north, toward Cornelia, the snow began to stick. A white powder showed on the ridged brown fields, and the little pines along the road began to wear caps of feathery white. In the yards beside the road valiant jonquils which had jumped the gun on Spring held their heads high while their yellow cups filled with snow.

Losing Fight Driving in such weather is a task, but the passengers suffer most, for the furiously beating windshield wipers slowly lose their fight. And soon the field of clear vision narrows, until the feeling is that of peering through a keyhole while rushing furiously through space, and out of the whiteness, dark shapes loom suddenly which Jim can see but which to me in the back seat are only sudden monstrous and noisy dangers, so that I am continually yelling, "Hey, look out," and pushing down on the floor board as if I am putting on brakes.

There would be brief intervals when only rain fell, and then snow and rain together, and then snow and thicker snow, until all the earth was white and only the brown strip of roadway lay unblanketed.

We pulled into a filling station in a little Carolina town.

"How is it, on north?" we asked the man.

"I don't know," he said. "They say there's two inches on the ground at Walhalla."

"What was it the AAA said?" I asked Jim.

"They said, 'Clear all the way, no snow, no ice.'"

"That's what I thought," I said.

We looked out the window at the swirling snow.

HAROLD L. ICKES

He Sticks His Neck Out

In making its Congressional Awards last year, to Sen. Arthur Vandenberg and Congressman "Mike" Monroney, the editors of Collier's Magazine observed that "a notable number of comments made to the committee about Rep. Monroney characterized him as a man who would 'stick his neck out' whenever he thought the occasion required a bold stand."

Such an occasion arose on March 13. Mr. Monroney lost no time in sticking "his neck out" to "solve" the sugar problem.

The House Banking and Currency Committee was considering sugar, and had just heard Mr. Walter S. Mack, Jr., President of the Pepsi-Cola Company.

"The American housewife," he said, "is the victim of the present system of sugar rationing which pretends to protect her with a ceiling price on sugar, but actually is setting up a system which is costing her over one billion dollars a year, and costing the taxpayers millions of dollars for the enforcement of a needless regulation."

TO MY MIND, sugar rationing should be improved, not done away with. OPA and the Department of Agriculture have tried to give the impression that this year every person in the United States will receive approximately 93 pounds of sugar. But of this 93 pounds, only 35 pounds will be honest-to-God sugar sold on rationing coupons. The balance, namely, 58 pounds, will have to be bought in the form of finished products at exhorbitant prices.

Mr. Mack pointed out that this 58 pounds of "sugar" will really go to the manufacturer, to be resold to the short-changed housewife in the form of soft drinks, sweetened fruit juices, candy, jelly, jam and preserves. Of course, if she has the money, the housewife can buy these products at exhorbitantly high prices, but, generally speaking, only the higher income families can afford these luxuries.

AND THEN it was that, if it had been watching, Collier's Magazine might have seen Congressman Monroney "stick his neck out."

"Mr. Mack," said Monroney, "you have repeated about a dozen times that we do not have rationing of sugar, that only the rich can get more than their sugar coupons. Now I cannot go along with you on that . . . because you can buy Hershey chocolate, I think, for six cents a bar . . . the poor can buy Baby Ruths just as well as the rich. They can buy a Hershey bar and melt it up for chocolate sauce for 6 cents a bar."

Now if you are one of those uninformed housewives who has been disheartened by your failure to secure enough sugar to bake pies and cakes, put up jams and jellies, and can fruits and vegetables, take heart from the words of Congressman Monroney. Undoubtedly, he would not have suggested that candy bars be substituted for sugar unless he had a drawerful of recipes for Baby Ruth apple pie and currant jelly a la Hershey bar. I suggest that you write him for these recipes. His address is House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Congressman Monroney advises that if you cannot get sugar with coupons, and cannot afford 65 cents a pound for honey, you might buy a "six-cent Baby Ruth candy bar."

Perhaps the Congressman has stuck his neck out too far. He ought to be a popular speaker at women's clubs.

Communist Is an Ill-Used Term

TUCSON, Ariz.—Paul Mallon, my colleague in the trade of taking in other people's worries, has come up with a proposal that we scrap the terms "communism" and "Communist" because they are inappropriate and tend to discredit themselves. He points out that the Russians actually do not practice communism at all, but live under a despotism only slightly different from Hitler's and would substitute "Russianism" for "communism."

"I don't know what he would use instead of "Communist." "Russophile" has a pompous air to it and "Russianist" is an improvised thing that wouldn't do, either. Anyway, the things we mean by "communism" and "Communist," while they do suggest Russia, are more serious than mere liking for Russia and the Russian people. Many exiles from old Russia still have an affection for their old homeland and for the people, and most Americans either like the Russian people or bear them no grudge but think of them as slaves who merely changed one set of masters for another in 1917 and never have known freedom. An American who wants peace with Russia certainly is not necessarily a Communist, and a lot of us were pretty sore when Henry Wallace, on leaving the Cabinet, put out the inference that those who disagreed with him on Russia wanted war while he was dedicated to a great, almost singlehanded, fight for peace.

I AGREE that the term "Communist" is a misfit for many of the Americans who, nevertheless, are not merely pro-Russian and would appease, if they do not actually admire, Stalin and his small group of bosses. Some of these Americans are very rich men who love a dollar, but their names are found on many of those phoney committees which the Communists get up.

I think one element among them likes Stalin and company, in spite of their ferocities to the Russian people and their brutal practice of slavery, because they have a mistaken belief that Lenin and Trotsky, who set up the present despotism, liberated the Jews in Russia. That simply isn't so because Kerensky's revolution did it and would have progressed to great reforms but for the arrival of the exiles who wouldn't be content with anything less than the slaughter of all the more intelligent and valuable Russians who couldn't get away. But, if Lenin and Trotsky could be given credit for this, then the German government of the Kaiser would deserve primary credit for the removal of the degrading restrictions and distinctions because the Germans let Lenin go through from Switzerland for the purpose of wrecking the Kerensky government and taking Russia out of the war on the Eastern front.

We have some other rich Americans who play luxuriously at being dilettant Communists or pro-Communists because they grew up in voluptuous extravagance, never had any more serious problems than deciding whether it would be Palm Beach or the Riviera for the Winter and want to get right with the revolutionists against the day when they try to take over in our country. They think they are practicing "Democracy" by drinking all night in mansions in New York with well-known Communists.

THEN WE have an element of abandoned riff-raff, some of them educated, to be sure, who resort to "Democracy" or "Communism" as an excuse for licentiousness. A girl named Dorothy Day put her finger on this a few years ago in a book called "From Union Square to Rome." This girl had been a fighter from way back and lived in real squalor to be with the poor in person, by contrast with the precious fakers, so numerous and pretentious in the entertainment business and the writing trade, who never forget that the poor have B. O. and therefore do their uplift from the best tables in the most expensive restaurants in New York, Hollywood and the Miamis.

Miss Day knew this trash first hand and knew that they were only slumming and used their liberalism or radicalism as an excuse for sleeping around. She quit the movement or element and, when last I heard of her, was still living down around Chinatown and practicing poverty in the most practical and painful personal way but as a religious and consecrated worker for humanity.

I think all these persons are playing with dynamite and looking for trouble because Russia has placed herself in a position of hostility to the United States. Everything we do is wrong. They won't even talk about a reckoning of what they owe us and won't even admit to their own people, much less to us, that we saved them millions of lives when we might better have let the Russians and Nazis chew each other up in a real showdown that would have left the victor too weak to threaten us, whoever the victors had been.

RICH MEN who contribute to Russian causes among us, causes thinly and unconvincingly disguised as progressive political movements intended only to stir commotion and keep us off balance, will holler persecution if these fakes ever succeed because they will succeed only in introducing some Fascist reaction. Herbert Hoover noted, a long time ago, that in all the European countries where the Communists goaded the people to desperation, with the sole exception of Russia, the result had been Fascism of one kind or another. True, Fascism and Communism are alike but each has its devil and the devil to Fascism is Communism.

Some of our Federal Courts have made a bad mistake in holding that it is an offense to point out that a person runs with the Communists and publishes or preaches parts or all of their political dogma. The decisions are not quite clear on this point but some of them seem to mean that if you call attention to such conduct by an individual you are calling him a Communist and that this might damage his reputation.

GALLUP POLL

Send Food To Germany?

PRINCETON, N. J.—The American people show a good deal of sympathy with the plight of Germans suffering food shortages.

Herbert Hoover reported recently that the condition of the German people had "sunk to the lowest level . . . in a hundred years," and that relief must be arranged quickly.

A coast-to-coast survey by the Institute finds two out of every three voters—a sizable majority—saying that they have heard or read about Mr. Hoover's report. When all these were asked what they thought of the report, the weight of sentiment was in favor of sending more food to the Germans.

The poll questions were as follows:

"Have you heard or read about Herbert Hoover's report to President Truman food conditions in Germany?"

Yes, have heard	67%
No, have not	33

Those who indicated that they have heard or read about the report were asked: "What is your opinion on Mr. Hoover's report?"

The opinions given showed a sizable margin in favor of carrying out Mr. Hoover's suggestions. The point of view of the largest group was typified by the comment of a Chicago minister interviewed in the poll. He said:

"It was a good report. We should carry out his proposals. We have a moral and humanitarian obligation to feed our former enemies and, besides, if we permit chaos to continue in Germany there's no telling where it might lead."

That general view is concurred in by six in ten of the people who say they have heard or read about the Hoover report.

Oponions opposed to Mr. Hoover's recommendations were expressed by about three in ten. These felt that stern treatment should still be meted out to the Germans. Their viewpoint is typified in this comment, from a San Francisco lawyer:

I thought Mr. Hoover's report was exaggerated. He wants too much done for the Germans. After all, they made millions suffer from hunger when they were top dogs. We shouldn't give them anything but the barest necessities for a while."

One in ten who had heard or read of the report were undecided about it.

Washington dispatches early this week indicated that the Army is already preparing to meet Mr. Hoover's recommendations. Supplies for soup kitchen feeding were reported to be arriving in Germany, and seeds to help rehabilitate German agriculture are ready for shipment.

A little over a year ago, in January, 1946, the Institute conducted an opinion survey on the German food situation, at a time when it was being widely discussed. Voters were asked whether we should ship more food into the area of Germany which we occupy.

The vote found 48 percent in favor of shipments, 35 percent opposed and 17 percent without opinions.

"Georgia State employees are relieved as Supreme Court makes final decision on governorship."—News item.

Uncertainty's a dreadful thing . . . it's hard for us to wait
Not knowing what the day will bring, not knowing whether fate
Will smile on what we try to do or chill us with a frown
And whether, when the day is through, we will be up or down.

But most uncertain of the lot are those whose futures hang
On whether they belong or not to some important gang—
If they bet on the "bob-tailed nag" instead of on the "bay,"
All they can do is pack their bag and amble on away.

It takes a bit of skill and wit and lots of common sense
Before a fellow learns to sit a-straddle of a fence—
He must be able as a scout to meet the unexpected
And very skilled at doping out just who will be elected.

Uncertainty's a plaguing fear but it assaileth never
The ones who know enough to cheer the winning side forever!

CHANNING COPE

The Old Lady Knew What She Was Doing

While heading out Route 12 toward the Yellow River recently, I noticed a feeble old lady working in the garden. She was quite close to the road and I could see her very plainly. It was too early in the year to be working in the garden, for it was fairly cold and from the way in which she was dressed, it was apparent that she likewise knew that Winter was still with us. As she raised up from working around a shrub, I observed, that she staggered two or thee steps and almost fell. From the startled expression on her face, it was evident that she was not expecting this sudden attack of vertigo. My first impulse was to slam on the brakes and hurry to her side. It is shocking to behold anyone out of control and it is positively alarming to see an old lady in this fix. Questions raced through my mind such as why should an old lady be taking such desperate chances as she was in leaning over and raising up, time after time? Where were her children that they would permit their mother to run such a hazard? Why doesn't she get someone else to work about the garden for her? An old lady's place is in the home, etc.

SUDDENLY it dawned on me that this old lady was doing exactly what she wanted to do and was probably happier at her task than she would have been at any other thing. What did it matter if her efforts resulted in dizzy spells, if she was doing what she wanted? From her appearance, this could easily be her last Spring, anyway. Who will say it is preferable to wrap oneself up completely and sit down to await the end? Better, of course, to go on doing the things one enjoys doing at her time of life. She was rushing the season, but this was indicative of the fact that her time was getting short. The fact that "It is later than you think," was doubtless in her mind and she was hoping to get in one more garden before she became one with the soil.

WHO IS TO SAY that it is preferable to spend the very last years of our lives in the state of constant self-care, or to continue to enjoy some of the simple pleasures of life right on up to the last moment.

Looking back on the episode of the old lady and her garden, I am glad that I did not stop the car and butt into her affairs. Chances are that she knew exactly what she was doing.

LEGISLATURE

liked to have the legislators put up the needed cash to expand services, friends of the Acting Governor say the death of the sales tax probably was another political break for Thompson. Talmadge leaders who backed the sales tax when they thought Herman Talmadge was going to serve as Governor played major roles in killing the measure when the Supreme Court put Thompson in office. This cut off Thompson's new funds, and makes it impossible for the Acting Governor to carry out the full program of expanded services. But, observers added, it did not place a sales tax on the desk of Thompson for signing or vetoing. Signing of a sales tax bill is not considered a path to popularity for gubernatorial candidates.

After a few days receiving hundreds of visitors who came to congratulate him while the Legislature was winding up its session, Acting Gov. Thompson today will get down to hard work of reviewing the numerous bills passed by the General Assembly. Bills already signed by Talmadge have been placed on Thompson's desk for acceptance or rejection. Legislative engrossing committees will be here this week completing preparation of other bills to send to the Governor's office.

Acting Gov. and Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Eva Edenfield Thompson, mother of the Acting Governor, spent their first Sunday in the Executive Mansion yesterday, with numerous friends dropping by for brief visits.

M. E. Thompson, Jr., with the Navy at Great Lakes, arrived early Sunday for a visit.

During its 70 days of factional fighting, the Legislature, which adjourned sine die Saturday afternoon, didn't pass a lot of good legislation, and it also failed to pass a lot of bad bills. Talmadge solons talk of a special session, but Thompson said he doesn't need one, and Thompson solons said it would be foolish to renew the warfare for the benefit of publicizing Talmadge's 1948 campaign. The solons had hoped earlier in the year to save back part of their 70 days for a brief session in 1948. They failed to do this, and they also let die a bill calling for annual sessions.

What did the 1947 Assembly do?

It permitted establishment of a 12th grade on the common schools, and Thompson quickly signed this measure.

The General Assembly passed a White Primary Bill which is under attack as a ruse to establish a State political machine. It may be vetoed.

It passed measures outlawing the closed shop in Georgia and banning mass picketing and check-off of union dues. But it failed to pass a constitutional amendment doing this, and there is talk that Acting Gov. Thompson may veto these measures.

It passed an optional Home Rule Bill for cities which will permit municipalities in 103 counties to vote on whether they would like to govern themselves on purely local matters. It permitted three counties to experiment with county home rule.

It passed a Building Inspection Bill designed to prevent in the future such disasters as the Winecoff Hotel fire.

It passed a measure divorcing the Veterans' Education Council from the Veterans' Service Department, hoping to end a row among veterans' leaders and improve "on-the-job" training.

It passed a bill cutting by 25 percent the contributions of employers into the jobless compensation pool, since the State has a large surplus in this fund.

It passed a measure permitting the State to regulate rates of insurance companies instead of waiting for the Federal Government to do this job.

And it passed bills raising the salaries of most major officials of the State. These included the State Commissioner of Health, State Auditor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Treasurer, Agricultural Commissioner, School Superintendent, and members of the Public Service Commission. It also raised the pay of the Entomologist, State Librarian and Deputy Clerks of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Appeals, and provided traveling expenses for the Parole Board.

A bill creating a retirement system for State employees failed, as did a peace officers' pension bill. Also dying was a measure raising the pay of attendants at Milledgeville State Hospital.

All of these bills were among the major work of the Senate and House.

The General Assembly failed to solve for the future the question that caused all the confusion this session:

How to name a Governor in event a Governor-Elect dies before his inauguration.

Several bills were introduced early in the session when tempers were at their hottest, but all eventually died. One would have called a special election immediately to solve the present crisis—instead of taking it to court. Another would provide for a special election on such an occasion in the future.

While they were talking about Governors, bills were introduced—and later died—that would limit a Governor to one term; extend the county unit system into the general election for electing a Governor and Lieutenant Governor, and subject a Governor to quo warranto proceedings.

So-called punitive legislation also died in this session. The General Assembly never did instruct Secretary of State Ben Fortson to use the Great Seal of State on orders of Herman Talmadge, nor did it abolish the salary and powers of Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook. It did not direct state officers and banks to recognize Talmadge's appointees. It did not change the setup of the State Purchasing Agent, or State Housing Director.

Bills to abolish offices or change offices were lost. These included the State Welfare Department, Agricultural and Industrial Board, Georgia Citizens Council, Forestry Department, Geology Department, Workmen's Compensation Board, and Unemployment Compensation Board.

It failed to change the libel bill or to ban liquor advertisements from newspapers.

The General Assembly killed a bill reinstating a poll tax as a money raiser for old age pensions, and also turned down a measure requiring all voters to reregister this year.

It passed a bill outlawing gambling on sports events, and let die a bill legalizing betting on horse races.

A proposed constitutional amendment to pay bonuses to World War II veterans died. So did a proposed amendment to permit the State Ports Authority to create a bonded indebtedness.

DOCUMENTS

(the Communist organization) is an indication of belief that Greece is a 'ripe plum ready to fall into their hands' within a few weeks through lack of support by the western democracies."

The document apparently was prepared earlier this month. It did not specify the authorship of the "master plan."

It accused the Communist press and radio of carrying on a ceaseless campaign of "vilification and distortion" ever since the liberation of Greece, "the purpose of which obviously has been to undermine confidence in British and U. S. actions regarding Greece."

The documents traced the development of the critical Greek situation through the war and after liberation up to the time the British Ambassador to Washing, Lord Inverchapel, handed this country two notes on Feb. 24 which have not been made public in full.

"These notes," one document said, "hoped that in view of the British inability to continue financial assistance to these two countries, the U. S. would be willing to take over the major responsibility for the military and civilian needs which must be financed from abroad."

The detailed files, reflecting intensive study and accumulation of material over a long period, said that "Soviet policy with respect to Greece has taken the form of strong verbal attacks, coupled with some positive acts." It listed among these positive acts, Russian support for Bulgaria and Albania in disputes with Greece.

"There is no indication," this report said, "that the Soviet Union will change its attitude of hostility toward the present Greek Government. The USSR may be expected to continue its verbal hostility to the present Greek Government and to applaud the active opposition elements in Greece.

"The Soviet member on the UNO Commission, aided by his Polish satellite, has done everything possible to place Greece in an unfavorable light and place the blame for frontier clashes on the Greek Government." This was believed to be the first reference to Poland as a "satellite" in a document of this type.

In dealing with the situation in Turkey, the documents declared that the "Moscow press and radio constantly vilify the 'Fascist' regime in Turkey, and Turkish language broadcasts from Radio Moscow even go so far as to call upon the people of Turkey to rise in revolt and overthrow their government."

"Turkey," said one document, "can do little to combat this war of nerves, but the Turks have made it clear that they will oppose with force any attempt to violate their sovereignty and territorial integrity." The documents put the key to Turkey's troubles in this way:

". . . The Soviets continue to seek special privileges in the control and defense of this waterway (the Dardanelles Straits). The Soviets, who have indicated a desire for certain strategic areas in Northeastern Turkey, are Turkey's neighbors on both East and West, so long as Societ occupation of Balkan countries continue, and the present critical condition in Greece is causing the Turkish Government the greatest anxiety.

"Nevertheless, despite the Turkish desire to return the country to conditions of political normalcy, to commence demobilization of the excessively large army, and to reconstruct and develop the national economy, the Turks are united and adamant in resisting outside pressure."

Then it outlined the significance of the American plan to send money and material to the Turks:

"Financial credit from sources which believe that the territorial integrity and independence of the Middle East are necessary for world stability would constitute firm assurance to the Turks that encroachment upon their sovereignty or integrity will not be countenanced."

One document dealt, too, with Turkey's maintenance of wartime neutrality until Germany's collapse became a virtual certainty. It maintained that "it is the view of the American Government that Turkey's neutrality during World War II was in fact beneficial to the United Nations and that our interest would probably not have been better served by Turkey's entry into the war at an earlier date."

It explained:

"Turkey alone could have accomplished little against the Germans, and the United Nations were unable to divert supplies and troops to assist Turkey in a Balkan campaign. In these circumstances, active participation by Turkey in the war might only have opened the way for the Germans to advance into the Middle East, whereby her neutrality safeguarded at least one entry-way into that vital area."

The documents emphasized Turkish willingness to sit in on an international conference to negotiate revision of the present status of the Dardanelles.

Woman Missionary

NEW YORK — (INS) —Major Gunvor Wilberg, one of the Salvation Army's most daring women missionaries, is determined to lose no time in returning to her mission post in Manila, even if she has to become a ship's crew member. She left New York recently for San Francisco, where she hopes to get immedaite passage on a Norwegian vessel bound for the Philippine Islands. Major Wilberg, a native of Oslo, is the wearer of Norway's highest civilian decoration, the Haakon 7th Cross of Liberty, given her by the King for outstanding service in the Philippines as a Salvation Army officer during the war.

PORTAL VETO

sition on the anti-strike question.

"This is a serious situation and must be approached from the standpoint of the good of the whole country," Hartley said. "We are sincere about wanting to write a bill correcting inequities in the labor laws."

Senate Democrats said Mr. Truman would veto the portal bill, which outlaws $6,000,000,000 of back pay suits, because it would rip the heart out of the Wagner Labor Relations Act and other Federal Labor statutes. This already has been underscored by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach. He warned Congress to prepare for "widespread labor strikes" if portal is enacted.

Sen. Pat McCarran, Nevada, ranking Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee, suggested that if Mr. Truman vetoes the measure, GOP demands could be met by passing a substitute outlawing portal suits but leaving the New Deal wage-hour laws untouched.

Veto advocates apparently were not discouraged by the fact that the Senate passed its portal bill by a 64 to 24 vote, more than the two-thirds necessary to scuttle a presidential veto. In the House, the vote was 345 to 56.

SIGNING FIRST GENERAL BILL—Acting Gov. Thompson, former school teacher, signs the bill providing a twelfth grade for Georgia schools as the first general legislative act to get his signature. Wage Pattern Set, Rubber's Big 4 Claim

CLEVELAND, March 23—(AP)—Weary unionists and company executives of the nation's "Big Four" rubber producers early Sunday averted a crippling strike hours before deadline, thus setting a wage pattern expected to apply throughout the industry.

After weeks of drawn-out sessions, and at least two breakdowns, the United Rubber Workers (CIO) and Big Four officials cancelled the first major industry strike threat of 1947 by agreeing on these terms:

(1) Hourly increases of 11½ cents for 110,000 Unionists, retroactive to Feb. 2, 1947. (Average current wage is $1.34).

(2) The new wage scale will be subject to reopening at the end of 120 days.

No increase in the prices of rubber products will be necessary as a result of the settlement, said L. M. Buckingham, Big Four Council, who asserted:

"We hope this settlement will serve as a precedent, or pattern, for meeting similar reasonable requests for cost-of-living wage increases, and that prices in general can be lowered through moderation of wage boost demands and over-all increased production in American industry.

"The rubber industry will not boost its prices and, as a result of this reasonable settlement, it is altogether probable that rubber products prices will be reduced because of increased production."

Some 100,000 non-union office and salaried employees of the Big Four also will receive an 11½-cent hourly pay hike, he said, estimating the increases would cost the companies from $45,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year.

The last-minute settlement—deadline was at midnight Sunday—established terms that undoubtedly will apply to workers in the smaller rubber plants scattered over the country, according to URWA International Pres. L. S. Buckmaster.

The Big Four—Goodyear, Firestone, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber—employ some 110,000 workers in 42 plants scattered through 20 states.

Captured U. S. Soldiers Returned To Allies

ROME, March 23—(AP)—Three American soldiers of the 88th Division occupying Venezia Guilia were returned to Allied Military Headquarters Saturday by their Yugoslav captors, the Mediterranean Theater command said Sunday.

They were Pfc. Robert Damore of Susquehanna, Pa.; Pfc. Thomas E. Vowper of Chicago and Pvt. George J. Fite of Chillicothe, Ohio.

A Yugoslav patrol picked up Damore and Vowper last Sunday and Fite was taken the next day. They had wandered across the Morgan line into the former Italian territory occupied by Yugoslavia.

U. S. army authorities lodged a series of protests which brought about their releases.

It's Your Buick — but our Sweetheart

WHEN you first slipped behind the wheel of that Buick of yours, remember how your heart lifted? Remember your happy smile as your toe touched off the hum of Buick Fireball power? And your widening grin when all roads seemed downy as you winged along on BuiCoil springing?

That's what Buicks are built to do. And they'll do it long and well when they're cared for as anything so fine should be.

Not just an occasional oil change, mind you. Not a haphazard "Look 'er over, fill the battery, check the air." But interested, competent, understanding car care that keeps your Buick at its best.

That's exactly what we're set to give. In our shop we have the special Buick tools to do jobs quicker and better. In our parts department is a stock of Buick engineered parts for Buick cars. And we have a staff of thoughtful, capable specialists who know their Buicks lock, stock and barrel.

No, it's not ordinary service you get here. It's expert car care—by an organization devoted to seeing that you get the most out of your Buick. And surprisingly, for the same work done, it costs no more.

Think it over. Isn't it wise to let us care for your Buick? After all, Buicks are our sweethearts, first, last and always.

LOOK AT YOUR BUICK
everyone else does

Your Buick has lines and style that win wolf calls. Are you keeping it smart and handsome as it should be? Are you protecting its good looks, its luster and color?

There's a way to do it that Buick engineers say is right. It's called Porcelainizing. This is a power-buffed finish that gives a smooth glaze to the body paint, sealing the pores and protecting the surface against road grime and dirt.

That's the way we do it here. Try it. See how it keeps a new car lustrous longer—how it gives older ones a new lease on good looks.

Dealer, Wife In Death Case Seem Serene

DETROIT, March 23—(UP)—Louis V. Thompson, wealthy auto dealer, said Sunday in his jail cell he was confident he would be exonerated of Grand Jury charges that he was the maniac killer who hacked his first wife to death in one of Michigan's most brutal killings.

The 49-year-old Thompson and his second wife, Helen Budnik Thompson, 39, were arrested Saturday on warrants issued by Circuit Judge George B. Murphy. Murphy suddenly re-opened the long-dormant injuiry into the October, 1945, killing last Feb. 1.

Discovery of the savagely mutilated body of Lydia Thompson, Russian-born laundry operator, 18 months ago touched off one of the greatest manhunts in Michigan history.

The investigation disclosed a two-year romance between Thompson and the beautiful Mrs. Budnik, who had been his secretary, and a bitterly jealous Lydia Thompson.

The stocky auto dealer apparently had been cleared completely in the original inquiry. Shortly after the probe ran into a dead end, Thompson married his former secretary. They have a five months old son.

Both Thompson and his second wife spent a comfortable night in Wayne County jail cells. Sheriff Edward Behrendt said neither appeared worried by the first degree murder and conspiracy charges.

Thompson insisted Sunday, as he did throughout the original murder injuiry, that his first wife accidentally met a sex maniac, who killed her and left her nearly decapitated body in a lonely lovers lane near Pontiac, a few miles from Detroit.

he said, "and we're going back whipped. We're going back with our tails between our legs."

The company said the strike cost $85,000,000—$65,000,000 production loss and $20,000,000 pay roll loss. The strike was one of the longest currently in the nation, outranked in length only by the current strike against the Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad and a Mack truck strike in New Jersey.

It was the second major strike ended by the UAW in two weeks. On March 9, the UAW local 180 ended a 438-day strike against the J. I. Case Farm Equipment Company at Racine, Wis. Settlement of that strike provided for wage increase averaging 25 cents an hour.

The Chalmers strike began after the Union and Company negotiated many months on the Union's demands for a 25-cent hourly wage increase, revised grievance procedure, Union security and other benefits. The last Company offer, on Jan. 23, was rejected by the Union under instructions of International officers. It called for a 13½-cent hourly increase which, in addition to a five-cent increase granted last year, would bring the Union's scale up to the national wage increase pattern of 18½ cents.

The strike began to deteriorate last August with a back-to-work movement, highlighted by mass CIO demonstrations and frequent clashes among pickets, non-strikers and police. Workers formed an independent union which challenged the UAW'S bargaining rights.

The recommendation for the strike's end was made by the Union Bargaining Committee; Harold Christoffel, honorary local President, and Buse, who returned Saturday from a meeting of the UAW's Executive Board at Louisville.

They said they wanted to remuster the local members, many of whom had obtained employment with other firms, and carry on the fight for a contract.

The Bargaining Committee said that in a recent "back-to-work letter" to Allis-Chalmers workers, the Company had admitted it had caused a stalemate by refusing to bargain with Local No. 248. This stalemate must be broken, the Committee said.

It said the Company had forced the Local to "go to the courts" to protect its bargaining rights which the Local retained in a State-sponsored election last Jan. 26.

"It would like to force us into another bargaining election while our forces are scattered on the outside," the Committee said. "In view of this we must muster our forces to retain our bargaining rights and keep company unionism and sweatshop conditions out of Allis-Chalmers. If the Company, through its maneuvers, is able to force another bargaining election we want to be in the best possible position to win this election. There is no question in our minds that we can prove our right to represent Allis-Chalmers workers, either in the courts or in another election, but that will take time . . .

"In view of this we are firmly convinced that our fight must be carried on inside the plant."

The Committee said that in making a recommendation to return to work it wanted to assure members that "the Union will never surrender to this arrogant and despicable Company."

"The Company agrees..."

BEFORE the New York Stock Exchange admits the securities of any company to its trading list, that company enters into a number of agreements with the Exchange, all in the interest of the investing public.

Of these many agreements, the most important of all is this: The company agrees to disclose, at regular intervals, the basic facts about its operations and financial condition.

Because of this agreement, investors have access to a wealth of essential information. As a result, it is possible to make facts the sole basis of investment decisions, so far as securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange are concerned.

Understandably, this Exchange cannot eliminate the risks which accompany ownership of securities—risks inevitable in the possession of any form of property. But its listing agreements do provide for disclosure of facts necessary to good investment judgment.

The wise investor seeks these facts... in the reports of listed companies... on the financial pages of the newspapers... at the offices of Member Firms of this Exchange.

Because there is a Georgia

GEORGIA distinguished herself in the maritime history of the world when the "City of Savannah"—first steamboat ever to cross the Atlantic—sailed from the port for which she was named on May 20, 1819!

Prior to that historic sailing—Georgia, in 1775, commissioned the first warship ever to sail against the Crown—and the first naval engagement—fought from the Port of Savannah—was victorious for the Colonies!

In 1788, Georgia, as a Colony, granted a patent for the first steamboat ever constructed—nearly two decades before the experiments of Robert Fulton.

Savannah once handled more business than all the other ports of the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic combined, and plans are being made today to restore Savannah and Brunswick to a place of leadership among the harbors of the nation.

The State Ports Authority of Georgia proposes to redevelop Georgia's two natural harbors—increasing transportation activities and commerce for the port cities—developing modern transportation facilities for the entire state—giving employment to thousands—and contributing to the earning power of all Georgians.

These plans call for the construction of fifteen million dollars worth of modern port facilities in Savannah and Brunswick, and require state support for their realization.

The future is bright for Georgia, as all transportation facilities are expanded—railroads—airways—roadways—bringing commerce eventually to seaports—whence go Georgia's and America's products to a waiting world—and where Georgia, in return, can receive the argosies of all the nations.

With the plans and proposals of the State Ports Authority and the cooperation of all the citizens of Georgia—our state can begin to reclaim her rightful place in the Commerce of the World!

Blake R. Van Leer.

Chairman, State Ports Authority
President, Georgia School of Technology

This is one of a series of pages devoted to the stories of Georgia's people and their achievements—and their effect upon the world of America's growth . . . "Because there is a Georgia".

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

SOMERSAULTS

I am 45. Would your somersaults be too strenuous a form of exercise for one of my age, without a physical check-up? (Alice C. C.)

Answer—Don't let that stop you from having a physical check-up—that's something any sensible woman owes herself as an annual investment. Somersaults are hardly exercise. Send stamped envelope for "Invitation to the Somersaultauqua." It tells what they are for and how to do 'em. I spend a few seconds rolling my own every morning.

ECZEMA

Could eczema be a hereditary ailment? (Mrs. N. N.)

Answer—Not as I see it. I have a pamphlet on eczema which any reader may obtain—send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for it in writing. I do not reply to clippings nor send anything to any other name or address than the correspondent gives as his or her own.

MANY A DULL ACHE

I have a dull ache in my left hip and extending down the thigh much of the time. After reading your article "Oh, My Aching Back" I am wondering if this may not be a manifestation of calcium shortage. (C. R. T.)

Answer—Search me. But it can do no harm to supplement your diet for the rest of the year with a suitable daily ration of calcium and vitamin D. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "The Calcium Shortage."

SWIMMING IS FINE

I had polio in 1944, but you would never know it to look at me now, although I still have a weak muscle in one leg. I love swimming, at the Y, and want to continue, but because I had a cold so often my daddy says it will give me tuberculosis. But mother says it will be o. k. if you say it won't hurt me.

Answer—I know of nothing that will help a polio victim to recover full use of the affected muscle or muscles so much as regular swimming.

SUPERSTITION

We have just butchered some pigs and stored the meat in a big ice box. But we are worried lest the touch of a pregnant woman spoil the fresh meat. (O. J.)

Answer—That is pure superstition.

One of the smartest silhouettes in the Easter parade will be the bolero. Often it is rounded of line, sometimes it has a small upstanding collar and sometimes it is fitted and double-breasted, reminsdful of the bell boy's neat uniform. But whatever turn it takes it is still a bolero and an unmistakable favorite fashion this Spring. Two examples of Spring costumes that feature the bolero are pictured, left: A black wool, slim of skirt and worn with a printed blouse, and, right, navy wool with blouse of champagne rayon taffeta. The black suit, by Anna Miller, has beautifully tailored details on skirt and long- sleeved, small-collared bolero. The blouse with surplice neckline and draped push-up sleeves is made of silk print in red and black on a white background. Complementing this suit is a hat of natural straw, whose undulating brim upholds three clusters of black silk roses with foliage. The navy suit at right has a closely fitted, double-breasted bolero with turnback cuffs and a widely flaring skirt. The hat of navy baku has new "width-at-the-sides" and is simply finished with navy grosgrain and heavy mesh veiling.

Mrs. Willis Weds Marion T. Davis

The marriage of Mrs. Myrtle Adams Willis to Marion T. Davis took place recently at the chapel of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist Church. Dr. Monroe F. Swilley, Jr., performed the ceremony and Miss Sue Patterson presented the music.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. James S. Tarpley, who wore a gold gabardine suit with brown accessories and white gardenias. Jesse E. Davis, Jr., brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Fred P. Bennett, C. Franklin Veal and Luther A. Alverson.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, James S. Tarpley, was lovely in a suit of brown suede cloth with matching accessories. Her hat was an off-the-face model of brown Milan straw. She wore white orchids.

After a wedding trip to Miami and Cuba, Mr. and Mrs. Davis will reside in Atlanta.

TAUGHT WITH DOMINOES, JIG-SAW PUZZLES

Aidmore Pupils Learn and Like It

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

School at Aidmore isn't much like school, the pupils say.

The young scholars don't sit primly in rows of desks and chairs. They come on stretchers, in wheel chairs and on crutches.

Class work isn't merely the learning of lots of stuffy facts. Class periods are a time for games—games which also teach the children reading and arithmetic and geography and other regularly-prescribed subjects.

And the teacher isn't a strict disciplinarian, ruling her class with a ruler, but a fun-loving woman who sometimes passes out bubble gum when the day's lessons are learned.

The school at Aidmore Home for Crippled Children started two years ago. There were only seven children enrolled at that time. Now there are 37.

Mrs. Lacy W. Acosta, who has been behind a teacher's desk for a score of years, is the teacher assigned to Aidmore by the Atlanta school system.

She teaches all grades from the first through high school alternating recitations. She can do it easily, she says with a laugh, because she formerly taught "in a one-room little red school house."

"I would prefer," she said, "to interest the children in their school work so that they will want to study than merely to fill them with a lot of facts they will forget. I want them to learn."

Mrs. Acosta said that in the past two years she has had two spastic children, one 13 and one 15, who could neither read nor write.

"And they thought they couldn't learn," she said, "but I showed them they could—and they did while they were here."

Mrs. Acosta teaches arithmetic by dominoes, and she teaches geography partly with jig-saw puzzle maps.

"Jig-saw puzzles," she explains, "also help children with spastic paralysis and cerebral palsy to learn muscle co-ordination."

"I love school."

Moncrief Co. Puts Furnace Maintenance on Annual Service Basis

Proper Furnace Care Is Assured By Early Checkup

"The Moncrief Furnace Co., has introduced a new plan of maintenance for home heating equipment which will assure all our customers of annual furnace inspection and maintenance service," states Laurence F. Kent, President."

Putting furnace maintenance on an annual service basis will, according to Mr. Kent, eliminate much of the confusion and disappointments experienced by those who call just prior to starting up their furnace for service only to find that during this season there simply aren't enough mechanics to go around.

"The annual service plans works like this. Customers are asked to place a standing order for the maintenance service desired and from that point on Moncrief takes over. The customer's name is put on a preferred list for a year to year furnace check up and maintenance service. Moncrief then goes ahead without further instruction and schedules the work during the Spring and Summer months. The service is continous and automatic for as long as desired, but the best part about this new plan," states Mr. Kent, "is that the customer pays no premium for this service. Each job is figured at the prevailing Moncrief rate. If major repairs or replacement parts are needed the customer is so advised in sufficient time to take corrective steps before Winter firing begins."

Moncrief offers a complete maintenance service on every type of home heating equipment—stokers, gas furnaces, blower filter units, coal furnaces and vacuum cleaning of air pipes and registers.

"Those who avail themselves of this annual service," says Mr. Kent, "may avoid the nerve racking experience of having their furnace break down during the heating season. It's bad enough to suffer the discomfort of being without sufficient heat at anytime, but what is even worse is not knowing how long it will take to put the furnace back into shape. Unfortunately such disasters always come during the coldest weather when repair parts and maintenance service are hard to get at any price."

Moncrief strongly urges all Atlanta home owners to take full advantage of this new service.

Applicants may register their furnaces by calling HEmlock 1281 or drop by the Moncrief Furnace Co., 676 Hemphill Ave., N. W.

Moncrief is well known among Southern homes. The company was established in 1898 and has during its 49 years of progress designed and developed a new standard of heating for Southern homes.

Emmett Steele Adds Two Experienced Men To His Busy and Model Recapping Plant

Also Handles Complete Line of Pennsylvania Tires

With additions made to his concern in both its personnel and mechanical methods, Emmett Steele, Inc., located at 275 Marietta St., is now better prepared than ever to render the highest type of service in both recapping and in the sale of the famous Pennsylvania tires.

After nearly three years in the service of Uncle Sam in Okinawa and other points, Emmett Steele, Jr., returned some several months ago and rejoined his father in his recapping plant. He had previously been associated with his father until his services were needed by the Government. Young Steele has taken up just where he left off and his connection now, both as to his mechanical knowledge on tire work and his training as assistant in the general management of the business, is proving valuable aid to the concern.

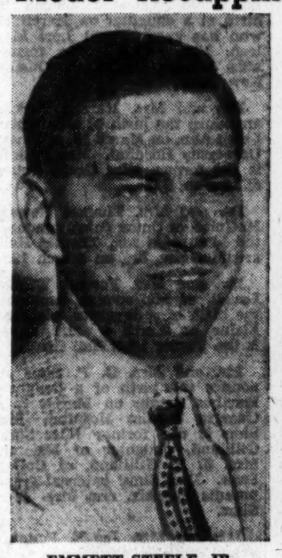

In addition, another man of long experience in the automobile field—H. M. Yeager—has joined the Steele concern and is adding much to it by his long and former experience in this line. He especially invites his friends among motorists to drop by Emmett Steele's place and give him the pleasure of serving them. He was formerly a Ford salesman, and was known as one of the best Ford salesmen in the city.

Mr. Steele, head of the concern, has been in his present location since early 1937, and wishes to thank his many friends who have made the success of his business possible through their patronage. Mr. Steele, by the way, is one of the oldest tire men in point of service in this city. His tire experience dates back to his return from the U. S. Navy in 1919, at which time he started to work for Dobbs Tire Company, later becoming general manager of Everett Strupper, Inc. Most all of his life in the business world has been spent in the tire business.

The concern handles the Pennsylvania line of new tires, and has enjoyed a good volume in both truck and passenger car tires. Mr. Steele says that in all his tire experience he has found no tire that would stand up and outperform the Pennsylvania.

The concern operates one of the oldest recapping plants in this section, and has enjoyed through the years an increasing volume of recapping business. Its equipment is of the finest type, and there are many obsolete size tires running on cars today which would have been junked long ago had not Mr. Steele been able to recap them. He states that there isn't a passenger car tire running on wheels today of a size that his equipment can not handle. Of course, the carcass must be sound, as they will not recap a bad tire.

If you are in need of recapping work, drive down to 275 Marietta St., and let Emmett Steele show you how quickly and correctly you can get your needs filled at his modern plant.

Delta Introduces Engineering Achievement in Hot Water System

Constitution Staff Photo—Carl Dixon

JANITROL TRIPLE SERVICE HOT WATER SYSTEM—Above shows Joseph De Lany, Sales Manager of Delta Air Conditioning & Heating Company, 240 Peachtree St., pointing to the single heating boiler, in attractive cabinet, which provides three temperatures of water in "one package" for comfort home heating, automatic laundry and bath. For more details on this amazing new hot water system, call CY. 5026.

Provides Three Systems in One For Modern Home

By PRESS HUDDLESTON

Delta Air Conditioning & Heating Company has just announced the introduction in Atlanta of the very latest postwar achievement in a hot water system. It is the new Janitrol Triple Service Hot Water System. Complete in one "package," it consolidates the features and functions of separate and distinct hot water appliances. Another unique aspect of this system, important to home owners and builders, is that it comes complete with all fittings, piping and convectors for radiation.

This remarkable hot water system can now be seen on display in the Delta Air Conditioning & Heating Co. showroom at 240 Peachtree St., where it is attracting unusual attention. The unit supplies three temperatures of water out of a single, compact boiler, cased in an attractive steel cabinet with baked, gray hammerloid finish. It furnishes water at modulated temperature, mechanically circulated for comfort heating, high temperature water for automatic laundry and dishwashing appliances, and tempered water for lavatory, tub and shower.

A model of efficiency, compactness and trim streamlined design, this unit is typical of the Janitrol line of better gas equipment. It is available in three sizes, ranging from 100,000 to 210,000 B. t. u. input. The cabinet can be installed easily in basement, utility room, closet, attic or adjacent garage, and all gas, water, electrical and flue connections are readily made in the conventional manner. Automatic controls are provided as standard equipment.

While this sensationally modern triple service hot water system is presently the center of attention at the Delta Air Conditioning & Heating Co., the firm also features the other time-proven gas-fired furnaces and heating units in the Janitrol line. These include forced-air and gravity furnaces, conversion burners and unit heaters of various types, such as blower units, duct heaters and heavy duty floor models. Floor furnaces and wall furnaces are included in the company's items available for prompt installation. The concern maintains a trained engineering department and its own shops for fabricating all accessories for complete jobs.

In addition, the Delta firm sells, engineers and installs the complete Worthington line of air-conditioning and refrigeration equipment, from the smallest to the largest type of installation for commercial and industrial plants. Also, it offers self-contained air-conditioning units in attractive cabinets, ideal for stores and offices, as well as window-type room air-conditioners for homes and average-sized offices.

Besides the foregoing, Delta is the local sales outlet for the famous C. V. Hill line of refrigerated display cases and reach-in and walk-in coolers, and for Sellers gas-fired boilers and water heaters.

All interested persons are invited to visit the showroom of Delta Air Conditioning & Heating Company at 240 Peachtree St., and to have any of its equipment explained in detail, without any obligation. Free estimates can be requested by calling CY. 5026.

NO BAG—It's the revolutionary new McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner which is distributed by Chas. S. Martin Distributing Company, Atlanta. Chas. S. Martin, left, and J. M. Waller are shown. See story herewith.

Chas. S. Martin Distributor for McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner

Announcement is made of the appointment of the Chas. S. Martin Distributing Company, 254 Peachtree St., N. W., Atlanta, as Georgia distributors for the McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner. A revolutionary type cleaner, more versatile than any other vacuum on the market, the McAllister has the enthusiastic indorsement of Chas. S. Martin, President of the distributing company.

The McAllister is bagless. It cleans, washes, mothproofs, aerates bedding, paints and has many other features that win instant approval of home-makers. J. M. Waller, sales manager of the Martin firm's Major Electrical Division, states that Georgia dealerships are available and invites retailers to contact him, Clarence L. Harden, R. E. L. Tolbert, Jr., or J. W. Barnett, salesmen in this division.

Gone forever is that disagreeable, dusty, grimy bag-emptying chore when the McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner comes into the home. It has a rubber-sealed metal reservoir, quickly and easily detached, that can be emptied as conveniently as a dust pan. With the McAllister there is no bag to empty, no paper filters to replace—you detach the reservoir in a jiffy and empty it as easily as a wastebasket.

Equipped with an oversize motor, the McAllister creates a powerful, super-suction that not only picks up surface litter and lint, but searches out deep-seated dirt and grit from rugs and upholstery. By scientific tests with U. S. Bureau of Standards' apparatus, the suction of the McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner, under actual operating conditions, exceeds that of any other domestic cleaner on the market.

Now you can launder heavy rugs and upholstery right in your own home. For the McAllister not only picks up dry dirt and lint, but suds and water as well. Give your rugs a good sudsing right on the floor, then pick up the suds with the McAllister Bagless Vacuum Cleaner. Rinse them thoroughly, then pick up the rinse water.

Your McAllister will take up so much moisture that your rugs will be thoroughly dry, right on the floor, in from one-half to one hour. Upholstery can be laundered in the same way. Auto upholstery can be cleaned and laundered to look like new.

Georgia retail dealers who have already placed the McAllister on their sales floors are enthusiastic over the tremendous number of selling features the cleaner provides.

On How Managers Pick Baseball Clubs

The following letter from George Hooks, a Cracker baseball fan, is quoted in part:

"I have a problem concerning baseball and Spring training camps. . . . By what methods do managers select a ball team? Does this sound crazy? Then let me give you a few facts. . . .

"Babe Ellis came to the Cracker camp in 1946 virtually untried and with little experience. He showed up well and started and finished the season as an outfield regular. He drove in 122 runs. Fine. I think he is good.

"But by the same token, Tom Saffell reports this Spring . . . has hit sensationally . . . yet your paper says the Crackers are set in left field with Ellis, and Trippi in center who has hit .550 but who doesn't have the experience of Saffell. This doesn't make sense to anyone. Why not start the season with both Saffell and Trippi?

"The Constitution keeps playing up the fact that it is hard for inexperienced men such as we have in camp to make the AA grade. Mel Ott made it is in the big leagues. So did Bob Feller, and I'll wager Clint Hartung will open with the Giants next month. . . .

"Last year they seemed to want to give the first base job to Jimmy Blair . . . but he finally was shipped. This year he is slugging out a mean .485 average and isn't getting a chance.

"In short, do they pick a ball player on his past record or what he does around training camp . . .?"

Well, George, that's a pretty large order, but we'll do our best.

Let's start with Ellis. Manager Cuyler KNOWS what the Babe can do against Southern League pitching. Saffell's previous record was compiled in a lower-classification league. Frankly, George, Spring training averages hardly mean a thing. As always, batters are two furlongs ahead of pitchers at this stage of the game, as the hurler waits until he's sure his arm is in condition before bearing down. The batter swings with everything the first time he steps to the plate.

A manager's job is to watch his ball players and select the best. He notes any hitches in their swings, any weaknesses at the plate, and while a rookie may bat .500 in the Spring, a smart manager realizes one of those faults will catch up with the rookie.

Another factor is that veterans such as Ellis are notoriously slow starters. They don't take their Spring games too seriously, in strict contrast to the rookies who are bearing down with midseason determination on every play.

All this doesn't mean that Saffell and Trippi will not start the season with the Crackers. In fact, the latter is a sure bet for center field and Saffell is the top choice for a utility job even now that Cieslak seems set for the right field post.

Exceptions to the Rule Continuing the conversation about making good in AA ball. The examples you cited, George, are extreme exceptions to the rule. For every one who has jumped right into AA or higher baseball from amateur ranks, 100 had to be farmed out for seasoning. This can be proven by a glance at major league rosters.

As for Hartung, he may well start the season with the Giants. But you'll remember he had experience in the Texas League last season, which is AA baseball. Clint may be one of those things, as they say, but he still has about five long months in which to prove it.

Batters are just as far ahead of pitchers in the majors as they are in the minors at this time.

Now about Jimmy Blair. We'll have to take exception to your statement that he isn't getting a chance. In fact, Jimmy is getting a great chance and is making the most of it. Nobody has handed the first base job to Bruce Konopka on a silver platter yet, least of all Blair.

From the looks of things right now, Blair will be with the club when it opens the season in Birmingham on April 11, either on first base or as a utility infielder. He isn't out of the running by any means.

Now the last question, "Do they pick a ball player on his past record or what he does in training camp?"

They pick him on a combination of both, plus the manager's judgment about him. After all, a manager is supposed to have a thorough knowledge of baseball and the ability to recognize a player when he sees one.

That's what he is being paid for.

Blues Rap Dallas, 49-10, In National AAU Meet

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 23—(AP)—The third-seeded Sports Arena Blues, of Atlanta, Ga., made an impressive debut in the opening round of the nineteenth Women's National AAU Basketball Tournament today, defeating the Dallas (Texas) Hornets, 49 to 10.

Alline Banks, regarded as the leading feminine cager, scored 19 points for Atlanta although she played only part of the game. Able assistance was provided by Ann Paradise, who meshed 14 points against the outclassed Texans.

In the tourney opener the Davenport, Iowa, AICs captured an overtime decision over the Mackenzies, of Topeka, Kan., 35 to 32.

The highly-regarded Jax team from New Orleans encountered more opposition than expected in the Nashville, Tenn., Parisi Dreamettes, but won, 39-30, while the most lopsided triumph of the afternoon program went to the Connor College squad from Warner, Okla., 49-9, over the Omaha, Neb., Teddy Bears.

Hanes Hosiery of Winston-Salem, N. C., defeated the Commercial Extensions of Omaha, Neb., 35-13 in the first night game.

Ghezzi Takes Title at 286

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 23—(AP)—Broad shouldered Vic Ghezzi, 1941 PGA champion, put together rounds of 72 and 73 today to win the $10,000 Greensboro Open Golf Tournament with a 286 total, two over par for the 72-holes.

Amateur Frank Stranahan, of Toledo, who started the final 36 in the lead, finished second with 288 after rounds of 75 and 73.

The $2,000 top money shot Ghezzi up to seventh on the year's list of money winners with a $3,215 total.

Stranahan, whose putter refused to behave, held a stroke edge over the second high pros, Bill Nary, Long Beach, Cal., and Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., two of the younger members of the caravan.

Gene Dahlbender, Jr., Atlanta amateur, wound up the grind with a 301 total.

Kramer, Hart Win Net Titles at Miami

MIAMI, Fla., March 23—(AP)—National Singles Champion Jack Kramer today defeated Billy Talbert in the finals of the University of Miami's fourth annual Invitational Tennis Tournament, 6-4, 6-2.

In the women's singles, Doris Hart, Wightman Cup player, won from Shirley Fry, 6-4, 6-1.

Kramer and Pancho Segura scored a stunning upset in the men's doubles to trounce National Doubles Champions Talbert and Gardnar Mulloy, 6-3, 2-6, 6-0.

Phillips 66 Winner

DENVER, March 23—(AP)—A breakaway start and a hammering last quarter by Bartlesville, Okla., (Phillips 66) was too much for Okland, Cal., (Bittners) Saturday night and the Oilers with a 62-41 victory, took the national AAU basketball championship for the fifth straight year.

Ted Cieslak Signs Pact, Heads For Cracker Camp

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY

The Atlanta Crackers' hopes for a third straight Southern League pennant went soaring Sunday as Ted Cieslak, the club's top swatsmith for the last two seasons, ended his turbulent off-the-diamond battle with the management for a pay hike and signed a one-year contract.

President Earl Mann flew in from the Crackers' training camp in Gainesville, Fla., had a long talk with Cieslak and both departed by plane for the Florida city Sunday night after the latter put his signature to the pact.

No terms were announced,

TED CIESLAK
Signs Cracker Contract

Mann stating that he and Ted came to "a mutual agreement."

Mann added that he believed that Cieslak, who will make the switch from third base to right field for the coming campaign, will be able to work himself into shape to start the season at his new position.

Cieslak, who led the league in runs batted in with 119 in 1945 and finished second in that all-important department last year, stated that he has been working out with amateur teams at Piedmont Park when weather permitted and is in pretty fair shape already.

Ted was one of the most feared clutch hitters in the Southern League in 1945 when he batted .363 and was voted the loop's most valuable player, and again last season when he clouted for a .354 average. He probably will be inserted in either the third or fourth slot in the batting order once he rounds into playing shape.

Crackers Nip Giants In 13th

By F. M. WILLIAMS
Constitution Sports Writer.

JACKSONVILLE, March 23—Scoring three times in the thirteenth inning, the Crackers defeated the Jersey City Giants here Sunday, 5-4, before 2,000 fans. It was the second straight day Atlanta has had to go extra innings to win.

Mgr. Ki Ki Cuyler sent two of his aces to the mound, Forrest Thompson and Shelby Kinney, and with a little luck they could have had a shutout.

The Giants got two runs off Thompson in the fourth on four hits that could easily have been putouts. One took a bad hop over Charley Glock's head and the other three were of the infield variety.

Atlanta scored in the first on doubles by Charlie Trippi and Glock and got another in the fourth on Bruce Konopka's single, a wild pitch and Roy Hartsfield's single.

From there out it was a great pitching duel between Thompson and Kinney, and Bob Howison and Mike Mellis.

Kinney's performance was the most impressive of the Spring. He worked from the seventh through the eleventh, gave up four singles and was never in trouble.

Lou Bush took over in the twelfth and received credit for winning.

Tom Saffell started the winning rally by walking and when Pitcher Pipher threw to second on Babe Ellis' bunt, all hands were safe. Glock beat out a bunt to load the bases and Pipher wild pitched Saffel home. Konopka's fly to center scored Ellis, and little Dave Williams singled to drive Glock home.

Garland Lawing singled to open the Giants' half of the inning and Burgess Whitehead, ex-big leaguer, tripled to right center. When Williams' throw got through Glock, Whitehead scored. Calvin Green singled in a pinch-hitting role after two were out and moved to third, but Bush forced Bill Lilliard to roll out to short to end the game.

The Crackers wasted opportunities to win in the tenth when Trippi beat out a bunt and stole second, his tenth base theft in eight games, and in the ninth when Konopka tripled to right center.

Columbus, of the American Association, will clash with the Crackers in Gainesville Monday afternoon.

Millers Thump Cracker Bees

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 23. Minneapolis took advantage of nine errors and 11 bases on balls to score a 10-3 victory over the Crackers' B team here today. The Millers jumped to a four-run lead in the first inning and were never headed.

For Atlanta, Jimmy Blair and Al Cross were outstanding stickmen. Blair slashed two singles and Cross a double and a single.

Buck McNaulty led the comedy of errors with three boots. Blair made two.

The fielding gem was turned in by Cracker Center Fielder Charlie Scruggs who raced deep along the left centerfield fence to pick off Martin's bid for an extra-baser in the third inning.

ABE WHITE SIGNS THREE ATLANTANS FOR GRIFFIN NINE

Bill Kirkland, Marist coach; Marcus McWhorter, brother of the Crackers' Pierce McWhorter, and Herb Manning, all of Atlanta, have been signed by Manager Abe White to play for his Griffin club in the Class "D" Georgia-Alabama League this year.

McWhorter, a right-handed pitcher; Kirkland, a catcher, and Manning, who will play the outfield, worked out with the Pimientos in their initial drill Saturday in Griffin.

Griffin will play exhibition games with Macon, of the Sally League, on April 5, and the Atlanta Crackers, on April 7, in Griffin.

U. S. Net Aces Reported Set To Turn Pro

PHILADELPHIA, March 23—(AP)—There's likely to be quite a reduction in the list of ranking U. S. amateur tennis players within the next few months if one can believe the word that is going around professional circles.

If such be true the newly organized world's professional tennis league can look for at least five additions by the time the All-England championships are decided at Wimbledon this Summer.

The word is that the first to line up will be Frankie Parker, former national champion who minced no words over the fact he didn't get a chance to play in the Davis Cup challenge round; Gardnar Mulloy, cup squad member, and Pancho Segura, colorful Ecuadorian.

Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, the two men who brought the famous trophy back to this country, are expected to say good-bye to the amateurs after playing at Wimbledon. A league spokesman said he wouldn't even be surprised if Billy Talbert joined the parade.

Happy To Hear Charges Today

SARASOTA, Fla., March 23—(UP)—Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler announced tonight that 22 witnesses have been subpoenaed for the hearing tomorrow into the charges of conduct detrimental to baseball against Branch Rickey, Leo Durocher and Harold Parrott of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Larry MacPhail, President of the New York Yankees, filed the charges and asked Chandler to subpoena 14 witnesses in his behalf. The commissioner ordered League Presidents Ford Frick and Will Harridge to appear.

Indications were the hearings, scheduled to open at 2 p. m., (EST), might continue several days.

The hearing will be closed to the press. Chandler indicated he will not announce findings for another 10 days or two weeks.

Marist Cagers To Be Feted

Fathers of the Marist College basketball players will play host to the cagers at 7 o'clock tonight at a Father-Son banquet featuring barbecue at Bill Daly's Red Barn, Father John McDonald announces.

Coaches R. L. (Shorty) Doyal and Bill Kirkland will be on hand for the presentation of letters.

'Cats Play Utah Five For Crown

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK, March 23—(AP)—The college basketball season winds up in a grand flourish this week at Madison Square Garden.

Monday night Kentucky and Utah battle for the national invitation tournament championship. On Tuesday Holy Cross and Oklahoma tangle for the NCAA crown. Then, if arrangements go through, the winners of these two games will meet on Thursday night to decide the mythical national title. On Saturday the East All-Stars will play the West All-Stars in a game sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

A couple of consolation games also are on the program. Tomorrow night, West Virginia and North Carolina State meet as a preliminary to Utah-Kentucky. On Tuesday the first game pairs Texas against CCNY. If Thursday's game is arranged, the losers of the finals on Monday and Tuesday probably will meet in a preliminary.

Kentucky, lucky to escape with a 66-to-62 victory against Long Island last Monday in its first tournament game after blowing a 19-point lead, is favored to whip Utah. But the way the Utes came from behind to beat Duquesne and then upset West Virginia, Adolph Rupp's Wildcats cannot become overconfident. A big lead doesn't seem to mean much in present-day basketball.

This was demonstrated anew Saturday night as Holy Cross won the Eastern NCAA title by trouncing CCNY, 60 to 45, at the Garden while Oklahoma nipped Texas, 55 to 54, to take the Western NCAA crown at Kansas City.

At one time CCNY held a 14-point lead, but Coach Doggie Julian's lads came from behind to take a 27-25 edge at halftime, then pull away in the second half after CCNY tied it at 35-35. George Kaftan tossed in 30 points for the Crusaders as they chalked up their 22nd straight triumph.

Texas led Oklahoma by seven points at halftime at 29-22, but the Sooners rallied and won in the last ten seconds on a long shot by Ken Pryor. It was only the second defeat for Texas in 27 games. Oddly both setbacks were by one point. The Oklahoma Aggies administered the first, early in the season, 40-39.

Bulldogs Open With Spartans This Afternoon

By JACK JACKSON

ATHENS, March 23—Georgia and Michigan State blow the lid off the 1947 College baseball season at 3:30 p. m. here Monday in the first of a two game series.

The Bulldogs, weakened by loss of injured Centerfielder Morton Smith, and possible loss of Hurler Billy Leac'i, by ineligibility, present a good hitting outfit, but the entire pitching staff is made up of rookies, all doubtful quantities.

State, which trimmed Georgia 6-4 and 16-1 in 1946, boasts a topflight nine, headed by Hurler Keith Steffee who has dropped just one college decision in two years. He, along with Robin Roberts, who hurled a no-hitter against Great Lakes last season, will probably see action against the Bulldogs on the Ag Hill diamond.

Coach J. V. Sikes plans to use Bob Still, Bob Callahan, Bo Clifton, and probably Lefty Miles against the Spartans, but hasn't decided who'll start Monday.

Paul Eskew, shortstop, will lead off, followed by Eli Marichich, second base, Tommy Jordan, leftfield; Chub Jenkins, first base; Rodney Colson, rightfield; Stan Dinsmore, centerfield; either Johnny Rauch or Hoakey Jackson, third base; Jim Gatewood, catcher; and the pitcher. Billy Henderson, catcher and Thurmond Hopper, towering first baseman, probably will play part time.

Lamar Murphy Reports

MACON, March 23—(AP)—The Macon Peaches squad was increased to 25 men here today when Lamar Murphy and Joe Smith, outfielders, reported for Spring practice.

A DOGGY AFFAIR—The Atlanta Kennel Club's thirty-sixth annual All-Breed Show at Lakewood Park Saturday and Sunday was just that, and Roger H. Jennings' Neva Butch, one of Atlanta's many fine boxers, did all right for himself, winning the Open Novice Class in his division. Neva Butch is shown with Miss Cherry LeBlanc, who handled him.

Scottish Terrier Wins Best In Show Award

By RUTH STANTON COGILL

As the Atlanta Kennel Club's thirty-sixth All-Breed Dog Show drew to a spectacular close Sunday night, the most coveted of bench show awards, Best Dog in Show, went to the Scottish terrier, Ch. Relgalf Rebel Leader, of Relgalf Kennels, Rye, N. Y.

Sporting dogs, an always popular exhibit, gave top place to the parti-color Cocker, Ch. Caucasian Jupiter, owned by Marion Mangrum and handled by Leo Schelver of Idlewood Kennels. An Atlanta contender, a Dachshund, also handled by Schelver, was winner of the Hound group. He was Laurence of Little Gate, owned by the Robert H. Sweets.

In the afternoon the Childrens' Handling Classes outshone the regular dog show routine with the Garrard sisters taking about all there was to take. The awards were made on handling ability and Janice Garrard, age nine, displayed the professional touch that put her Collie, McAllister's Bonnie Heather, in first spot in Class A—for boys and girls 6 to 10 years of age.

Midget, fancy Pekingese, also won and was ably handled in the 10 to 16 years class by Jo Beth Garrard, 15 years.

SPORTS WRITER LEAVES DESK TO PLAY PRO BALL

LITTLE ROCK, March 23 (AP) — Ernie Crone, Assistant Sports Editor of the Arkansas Gazette, will discard his typewriter and pencil for a catcher's mitt and a mask beginning Tuesday when he starts baseball practice with the Ft. Smith, Ark., club of the Class "C" Western Association.

Only 17, the six-foot-five 230-pound Crone was signed by a New York Giant scout who saw him play with the Little Rock American Legion Junior team last year.

Eddie Miller Seeks To Rejoin Redlegs

TAMPA, Fla., March 23—(AP)—Eddie Miller, Cincinnati's ailing shortstop, who previously had announced his retirement from baseball, has advised the Red management that he had changed his mind and would like to rejoin the club, Warren Giles, General Manager of the club, said today.

Giles said Miller had agreed to train with the Syracuse Chiefs, a farm club of the Reds. The general manager hinted Miller would be sold to the highest bidder.

Petrels Start Drills, Slate Bulldogs

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Oglethorpe University, set to field its first baseball team since the renowned coach, Frank Anderson, left the Peachtree Road institution at the turn of the decade, will begin drills with some 50 candidates reporting to Coach Swede Phillips this afternoon.

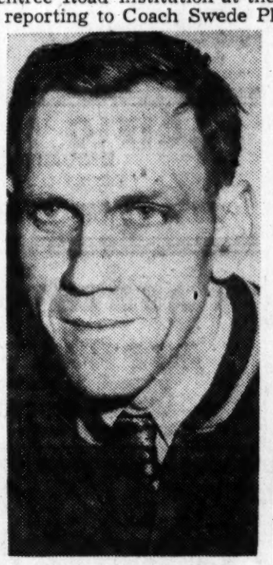

The Stormy Petrels will open their 16-game schedule Friday, April 4, against J. V. Sikes' University of Georgia nine in Athens, and play the same team at Oglethorpe the following day.

The remainder of the schedule has yet to be made up. All tilts will be with teams in the immediate vicinity, however, and any club interested in carding the Petrels may write Coach Phillips at Oglethorpe.

Many of the outstanding candidates are former Atlanta high school players, the majority hailing from Tech High. Paul Sheppard, Smithie ace of several years ago; Bob Greer (not the All-Southern football player), also an ex-Smithie, and Bob DeVaney, of Richmond Academy, are the top prospects among the righthanders for mound duty. Jim Hinson, Tech High, and Jack Smith, Cartersville High, are the best southpaw hurlers in sight.

A. Z. Johnson, of Tucker; Bob Finley, Tech High, and Jim Gisi, Marist, are among catching prospects. Harold Crowe, Tech High, and Pat Communale, from New Jersey, probably will battle for the first-base job.

Bob Boggus, West Fulton, and Ernie Procalo, of St. Mary's, N. J., are keystone aspirants. Don Brennan, ex-St. Mary's Pre-Flight shortstop, probably will start at that position. Jim Phillips, of Conyers, will vie for the hot corner berth.

SWEDE PHILLIPS
Leads Petrel Nine

Outfielders expected to be in the thick of the battle include Ed Baker, Tech High; Max (Red) Ivy, a South Georgian; Wally Smith, Hogansville, and Dick Bynum, from Mississippi.

Coach Phillips, named new head football and basketball coach at Bass High for next year, will wind up his chores at Oglethorpe with the baseball season since the school has decided not to return to the intercollegiate grid wars next year as anticipated. The self-styled "poor man's Adolph Rupp," this year put the Petrels in the National Association Intercollegiate cage tourney in Kansas City, making Oglethorpe the first school from Georgia ever to be represented in the meet.
